Hoodlums dog elderly who flee violent crimes

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — They come to Florida to flee the cold, the bustle and the crime of the northern cities. In return, they experience warmth, leisure and — for increasing numbers of the elderly — the same helpless, heartstopping fear of the same violent crimes.

"A lot of people have been moving here for the weather and so forth. A lot of them thought they were leaving the crime factor behind," says Max Serchuk of the Dade County Council for Senior Citizens.

"But they're finding it here. The hoodlum element followed."

Police in the Miami and St. Petersburg areas, two regions with heavy concentrations of old people, say they are receiving more and more reports of crimes committed against elderly residents.

—In Miami, 15 detectives are searching for a man who robbed and attacked dozens of old people. Police attribute one death to the man who they say, "Has a particular fetish for preying on the elderly."

—In Miami Beach, three elderly women were bound and gagged this past week by two assailants who searched the apartment for valuables. Enraged when one of the women said she had only three cents, they began beating her. The woman finally died, suffocating to death on the gag in front of her horrified friends.

—Also in Miami Beach this past week, a woman nicknamed "The Cat Lady" because she fed and otherwise cared for the city's stray felines was savagely beaten as she knelt over one of her wards in an alley.

—In St. Petersburg, at least 30 old people have been victimized by two gangs — one on the north side of town, the other on the south side. Robbery and rape are the specialities of these gangs.

"People who commit crimes are cowards at heart and the elderly can't fight back," said Miami police Sgt. William Cauchi. "They are old and defenseless. They're ripe for the picking."

St. Petersburg police Sgt. W.E. Hughes said crimes against the elderly "certainly have picked up," and have an icy effect on the community.

"They (old people) don't go out anymore," Hughes said. "They're all battening down the hatches. That's not what they came to Florida for."

Murray Berliant, 80, said he moved to Miami Beach last year after being mugged in New York City.

"I figured this was as nice a place as you could live," he said. "But I have learned that I've been living under a wrong illusion. When I see what goes on in the buses and streets.... My wife and I wouldn't walk out of here after dark for anything."

Ben Burack moved to Miami Beach from The Bronx four years ago. In 1974, he was mugged as he got off a bus on Collins Ave.

"I try to make a joke out of it," said Burack. "But believe me, it hurts plenty. You think you've moved away from it, and then you find it all around you."

Some of these old people survived the Nazi concentration camps years before they came to northern U.S. cities and many of them are trying to live on meager Social Security allowances and are worried about sickness. For them, Serchuk said, the constant fear of violent crime seems like the final indignity.

"We used to grow old without getting all these attacks," he said.

'More work, less jobless aid'

Panel recommends shift in emphasis to learning new jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal study commission recommended on Saturday that the government shift its emphasis from supporting people out of work to helping them learn new jobs.

Among other things, the commission recommended that Congress allow to lapse in March the special legislation which extended jobless benefits by 26 weeks to a total of 65 weeks.

Although the commission had recommended extension of those benefits nearly two years ago, it said the changed character of unemployment requires a policy shift.

The National Commission for Manpower Policy said its proposals are "in consonance with its belief that it is better for employable persons to work or to be in training for work than to receive extended unemployment compensation benefits."

Commission Chairman Eli Ginzberg, a Columbia University economist, explained in a news briefing that two years ago, during a deepening recession, the problem was to provide a cushion for workers who had been thrown out of work temporarily.

But now, he said, nearly half of the 7.8 million people out of work are under 24, most of them with little or no training. He said they are likely to continue to be frozen out of the job market even if the economy continues growing.

Most of the specific recommendations to Congress and the administration focused on the problems of the young, poor and black.

Ginzberg said most of the recommendations are in harmony with President-elect Carter's positions on jobs.

The report called for reducing the unemployment rate from 8.1 to 5 per cent by 1980 and stimulating creation of 2.5 million jobs a year. Ginzberg stressed the private sector must shoulder most of the load.

In addition to proposing a shorter term for unemployment benefits, the commission recommeded:

—Double the 20,000 jobs currently available through the Job Corps for city youths and convert the summer-only Youth Conservation Corps in rural areas to a year-round, 50,000-job operation.

—Take the money which otherwise would have been spent on extended unemployment insurance and spend it instead on people whose benefits run out.

—Add $1.5 billion to the money being spent under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act and set income limits so more jobs would go to poorer people. The money would provide an estimated 250,000 new public service jobs alone.

—Expand the work incentive program under which an estimated 200,000 welfare recipients received training and jobs last year.

The commission estimated that the net cost of the jobs package contained in its report would be $4.5 billion for the next two years combined.

The commission is composed of the secretaries of defense, commerce, labor, agriculture and health, education and welfare along with a dozen other leaders from government, industry and academia.

Death toll in tanker blast now 7

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An explosion and raging fire that shattered an 810-foot oil tanker in the harbor claimed seven lives, authorities said Saturday. Two persons were still missing and at least 50 were injured.

Divers searched the twisted ruins for more bodies as vacuum boats cleaned up a 7,000-gallon oil spill.

The blast aboard the Liberian-registered Sansinena came Friday night after the tanker unloaded 512,000 barrels of crude oil and was refueling and taking on a cargo of fuel bound for Indonesia, fire officials said.

The explosion lifted the center three-fourths of the ship out of water and over two untouched light poles, dumping it mangled and upside down on the dock. Chunks of steel 25 yards long were flung into the ground like giant darts, and windows 21 miles away were shattered.

"I thought it was an A-bomb," said Vince Perri, who happened to be passing the harbor when the blast occurred. "I thought it was all over, I swear. I thought it was the war."

The ship's bridge was blown off the deck and hurled onto a dock guard house. It was not known if anyone was in the guard office or on the bridge, but one of the guards was missing, firemen said.

Steel hatches three-quarters of an inch thick were twisted like bottlecaps and tossed hundreds of yards away. The blast was heard and felt as far as 40 miles away in the San Fernando Valley.

Coast Guard Adm. Robert I. Price told a news conference Saturday afternoon that the Coast Guard will conduct a Marine Board of Inquiry to determine the cause of the explosion. The inquiry, to be headed by Rear Adm. James Moreau of Hawaii's 14th Coast Guard District, would be assisted by the National Transportation Safety Board, Price said.

The ship and its 32-man all-Italian crew had been scheduled to leave port at 10 p.m. Friday.

The first tactical alert since the 1965 Watts riots in Los Angeles was called by police officials after looters began lifting merchandise from stores all around the harbor. Officers moved in to guard the establishments.

Seven hospitals took care of the injured, at least 25 of them bystanders burned by the flash or cut by flying debris.

"The coroner says he has enough pieces to make five bodies," said fire department spokesman Ed Arbuckle, but he added that does not necessarily reflect the correct number of dead.

"It may be days before we know," he said, adding that there is no way of fixing the dollar damage.

Several smaller boats sustained minor damage in the blast, firemen said.

Officials said what little oil escaped the blast and fire was scooped up by a Coast Guard vacuum boat.

Juan Rodrigues, assistant manager of the oil terminal, rushed back to find the pier in flames after feeling the blast half a mile away in a store.

"All of a sudden that thing just blew like there was no tomorrow," he said. "It was like a shock wave. All the windows just gave out in the store."

Gaylee Hermosillo, a harbor area nurse who hurried to the docks to help, said she counted at least 23 injured men pulled from the water by county lifeguard boat crews as flames shot into the sky.

"It was like a mushroom," she said, "flames hundreds of feet in the air."

Fire officials said they believed the explosion occurred when fumes from the cargo hold escaped after the unloading and were ignited by a spark.

The Los Angeles and Long Beach harbor areas have been considered for a major Alaskan oil unloading terminal and for unloading and storage bunkers for liquefied natural gas. Environmentalists and fire officials have voiced concern about the dangers posed by bringing more volatile cargoes into a harbor already ringed by fuel storage facilities.

State Air Resources Board Chairman Tom Quinn said the explosion renews his concern about the perils of using the port.

Motorcyclist dies in crash with auto

A 50-year -old Pomona motorcyclist was killed Saturday morning when his cycle rammed the rear of a car stopped to make a turn into a service station on Vineyard Avenue in Ontario.

Jack Allen Miller of 11194 Pipe Line Ave., Pomona, was killed instantly in the 10:34 a.m. mishap.

Thomas Dean Burson of San Bernardino told officers he was northbound on Vineyard Avenue and had stopped opposite G Street to go into a service station, but could not because another vehicle was exiting from the station.

He said he saw in his rearview mirror a motorcyclist approaching his car from the rear at about 50 m.p.h., and prepared himself for an impact.

Man accused of setting fire to own apartment

A 26-year-old Pomona man was arrested Saturday on suspicion of arson after allegedly setting fire to his own apartment, police said.

Officers booked Richard Arciniega shortly after the fire raced through his apartment at 636 E. Seventh St. at 1 p.m. The blaze caused $6,500 in damages.

Pomona firemen, who refused to disclose exactly how the fire started, said it broke out in two bedrooms. It also caused damage in the hallway of the apartment.

Arciniega was not injured and the blaze was confined to his apartment.

Adoption of woman by her lover criticized

WESTERLY, R.I. (AP) — The adoption of a 32-year-old woman by her 33-year-old lover "borders on incest" and may violate state law, Family Court Judge Angelo G. Rossi said Saturday.

Joseph A. Comolli 3rd, who is married but in the process of obtaining a divorce, adopted Elaine Ivy Tattersall in Westerly Probate Court last Wednesday.

Comolli's lawyer, Aram K. Berberian, said the arrangement is absolutely legal and allows the couple the "respectability" of having the same last name without being married.

Berberian said Comolli and Miss Tattersall do not want to marry. By adopting Miss Tattersall, even though her parents are still alive, Comolli can claim her as a dependent for tax purposes and avoid payment of alimony if they should ever separate, Berberian said.

Comolli and his new "daughter" have refused to discuss the matter.

Comolli and his wife, Diane, have two children, aged 10 and 12. Mrs. Comolli said Saturday that Comolli "should have thought of his children before doing this ... The 12-year-old is old enough to understand, but I'm worried about them."

She said she has consulted her lawyer to determine that Comolli's action did not legally make her Miss Tattersall's "mother."

Comolli's lawyer declined to reply to criticism of the adoption.

"A lot of people might not approve," Berberian said, "but I'm not running a popularity contest. I'm a lawyer."

Berberian said he adopted his girlfriend while he was obtaining a divorce himself. He later married his "daughter."

Accuses Saudi Arabia

Iraq widens oil split

Iraq widened the split among oil-exporting countries Saturday by accusing Saudi Arabia of attempting to force world oil cartel members to give in to pressures from Western governments and oil companies.

Iraqi Oil Minister Tayeh Abdul-Karim said Saudi Arabia was trying to "render the oil weapon ineffective."

Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) broke the cartel's united front Friday by refusing to accept the two-stage 15 per cent oil price increase adopted by the 11 other oil-exporting nations at a meeting in Qatar. The two dissident members will raise the price of crude oil by 5 per cent.

In a heated response to the Saudi action, Abdul-Karim said Saudi Arabia was trying to make the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) "succumb to pressures from the oil monopolies and imperialist forces by perpetuating a price freeze."

Iranian experts said Saturday that the Saudi decision to undercut other OPEC members coincides with the opening of their gigantic oil export terminal at Ra's at Tannurah on the Persian Gulf. Saudi Arabia now pumps 8.5 million barrels daily. Through the new line, Iranian experts claimed, Saudi Arabia could boost its exports up to 20 million barrels daily.

Saudi Arabia has said it will boost oil production to dilute the market effect of the 15 per cent hike. However, no mention has been made of the country's potential production capacity. Saudi oil presently accounts for 30 per cent of all OPEC oil.

"Saudi Arabia wants to paralyze OPEC and bar it from defending the interests of its members and peoples," the Iraqi declared. Abdul-Karim urged all Arab nations to condemn the Saudi action.

The Arab nations used an oil embargo as a weapon against the West after the outbreak of the Arab-Israeli war in October 1973. The embargo was an effort to stop oil-importing countries from supporting Israel. OPEC countries at that time quadrupled their standard world price for crude oil. Prices rose further when the embargo was lifted.

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, has said that world economic conditions were too precarious to withstand a large oil price increase. He argued that a price rise now would harm everybody, including the oil-producing countries and developing nations.

Iraq and the 10 other members of the 16-year-old organization said they needed a substantial price increase to offset erosion of their purchasing power caused by inflation in industrial countries.

President Ford and U.S. officials said they were pleased with the Saudi and UAE decision to limit the oil price increase. However, Yamani warned the Western countries that OPEC members would get together again soon. "OPEC continues strong," he added.

Saudi Arabia said it expects concessions from the United States for its firm stand to hold the line on oil prices, but President-elect Carter said "no quid pro quo" has been promised.

Rescue team pulls 2 boys from cliff

Two young hikers were rescued by San Dimas sheriff's mountaineers Saturday after becoming stranded on a 350-foot high cliff in the San Gabriel Canyon above Azusa.

Keith Greco, 12, of Azusa, and David Morrow, 16, of Baldwin Park, were stranded for about an hour and a half before the sheriff's mountain rescue team used ropes to rescue them about 3:30 p.m.

A passing motorist heard the boys' call for help and notified the sheriff's department. The youths were not injured, according to deputies.

Gun tests link assassinations

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Ballistics tests show the .45-caliber pistol used to gun down a top security police official this week was the same weapon used to assassinate U.S. Central Intelligence Agency station chief Richard Welch a year ago, police said Saturday.

Police ballistics specialist Menelaos Cornilakis said tests on the bullets taken from the body of Evanghelos Mallios provided the first physical link between the two crimes.

An otherwise unknown leftist group calling itself the "Revolutionary Organization of Nov. 17" has claimed responsibility for both killings.

Hawaii shaken by earthquake

HONOLULU (AP) — An earth tremor measuring 5.2 on the Richter scale was reported on the island of Hawaii early Saturday.

The quake at 4:01 a.m. was centered 6 miles southeast of Kilauea, in the east rift zone of the Kilauea volcano, the Honolulu Observatory said.

Hilo police said there were no reports of damage.

Chino trustees to discuss selecting new school chief

Chino school trustees are expected to discuss methods of selecting a new superintendent at their first meeting in January.

Board President Al McCombs said this week that discussion of possible methods of picking a successor for Supt. Royce Lapp would come up at the January meeting.

Lapp submitted his resignation on Nov. 23, and sources indicated it was a forced resignation. Although Lapp requested a transfer to another certificated position and did not say it was a resignation, McCombs and other board members consider it as such.

The superintendent's current one-year contract expires next June 30, and board members have said they want to begin discussing a successor as soon as possible.

"It takes some time to find a good man," noted board member Lyle Briggs. "We want to pick a new superintendent before Lapp leaves."

Briggs said trustees must decide if they will conduct a nationwide search or just advertise locally.

In other business this week, trustees gave final approval on a 3-2 vote to a new policy that will require students new to the district to be enrolled in the year-round program.

Students in grades kindergarten through 10th would not have the option given other students of enrolling in the traditional nine-month program.

Under certain circumstances, including family hardship, newcomers may be assigned to the traditional program.

The plan is an outgrowth of the decision to make Don Lugo High School a year-round campus and keep Chino High as a traditional school. Lapp said that since students initially have the option of which school to attend, the policy on newcomers will give the district a chance to balance enrollments at the high schools.

Trustees Briggs and Augustine Tapia voted against the policy. Briggs noted the plan puts "mandatory year-round school into effect."

Shots from car kill Ontario man, wound nephew

A 19-year old Ontario man was killed and his 14-year old nephew wounded when they were shot down in the 1400 block of South Fern Street in Ontario at about 1 a.m. Saturday.

Robert Moreno Aguilar, 2229 S. Cypress St.; was pronounced dead at Ontario Community Hospital at 3:07 a.m. Saturday following the shooting. His nephew, George Daniel Aguilar was treated at the hospital and released.

Ontario Police said the two victims were walking home southbound on Fern Street after spending an evening with friends. A car reportedly approached from the rear and stopped near them. Someone in the car called the two Aguilars over to the car and as they approached they were fired on.

The elder Aguilar suffered wounds in the left cheek, right hand and lower abdominal region. His nephew was wounded in the right elbow. Make and caliber of the weapon used in the slaying remains unknown.

Following the shooting, the Aguilars reportedly hobbled across the street to seek aid. The first house was reportedly empty and as the two victims made their way toward the second house a second car, also approaching from the north, reportedly fired on them again.

Witnesses reported hearing approximately seven shots fired in all.

Police are continuing their investigation of the slaying.

HOME SWEET HOMES SOLD These lucky families were the first in line at the sales office of a new housing tract in Alta Loma Saturday at which 42 homes were sold by the end of the day. 39 families camped out in front of the sales office to get a chance at the homes. Some had been there since early Wednesday. Altogether, 300 families applied to buy the homes built by Jensen.

Alta Loma homes soldout

Crowd of eager campers attracted

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

They lined up for over a block down the street of the brand-new Alta Loma homes. Many had camped out since early Wednesday, families, pets and all.

For the most part, they were young, recently married couples. Interspersed among them, however, were a retired Air Force man and two single men.

Why were they waiting?

Saturday at 8 a.m. the sales office for 42 Bob Jensen homes in Alta Loma was scheduled to open and begin selling. At that time, nearly 300 families were ready to vie for an opportunity to purchase one of the homes. By the end of the day they were all gone and the homes were sold.

Thirty-nine families in all had spent at least one cold night to get a chance at the homes.

"There goes number 18," commented John Sweeney, first in line, as another camper drove by to take its place behind the row of campers, vans and trucks.

The kids of a number of families played happily in the streets. Many were becoming friends and would probably soon be neighbors.

Meanwhile, the adults waiting to buy the homes began to chat. "Oh! You live in Pomona . . . So do we," said one. "How many kids did you say you had," queried another.

It all seemed to be fun and everyone was enjoying himself, much like a campout at the beach or in the mountains.

"We looked all over the place for a house," said Cindy Griffith of Pomona. "We even looked as far away as Saugus, but these are the houses we liked best. They are by far the nicest for the price."

Mrs. Griffith, and her husband, Dan, have been looking for a home for themselves and their three children, Brent, 6, Brandon, 5, and Brice, 1, for over a year.

The $38,000 to $43,000 Jensen homes are just what they were looking for.

"We want our boys to grow up in a nice area," said Mrs. Griffith. "What could be nicer than Alta Loma?"

Debbie and John Muskthel of Cucamonga weren't even looking for a new house. They happened to pass through the neighborhood one day, liked what they saw and put their house up for sale.

"We only live a mile away," said Mrs. Muskthel. "But these are a good deal and you just can't pass them up. This is the best buy in a house of this size that we've ever seen."

Indications are that the Jensen homes the families are waiting for may indeed be a good buy.

Right across the street from the new homes is a Jensen development due for completion in 1977. The homes are pretty much the same, but the prices will be an average of $1,800 higher.

"It's getting hard for people to afford a home these days," says Bill McKaig, who is waiting to buy one of the 42 Jensen houses. "But with these at least you're getting you're moneys worth. What else can I say."

Legal 'experience' set

Nine students from the La Verne College Law Center are working with the Pomona Legal Aid Society in a new program which offers clinical experience for the students and assistance for the attorneys and clients of Legal Aid.

The involvement of the second, third and fourth-year law student varies.

Earl Clampett, a third-year day student and president of the student bar association on the campus, appears on radio station KKAR at 2 p.m. Friday afternoons along with the directing attorney of the Pomona Legal Aid for a Spanish-language question and answer program designed to inform the Spanish community of legal problems in general.

Dean Hall, another third-year day student, is handling court appearances under the supervision of a staff attorney.

Michael Dest and Mrs. Pat Hopkins have specialized in handling Legal Aid's administrative cases. These include problems of welfare, social security and unemployment.

Other students involved in the clinical experience program do research and interview clients.

Started in August, the program means the Pomona Legal Aid has been able to increase its capacity to see clients who are in need of legal advice, including those who speak foreign languages.

Dest said "Law school teaches a student the theory in resolving a problem. Legal Aid experience shows how to apply the theory to factual situations."

The program has been called successful to date. Since Legal Aid personnel cannot accept cliental compensation for their help, one very satisfied client who was assisted by a law student donated $98 to Pomona Legal Aid.

Gilmore guarded round-the-clock

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Condemned killer Gary Gilmore, recovering from his second suicide attempt in a month, was placed in isolation under 24-hour guard at the Utah State Prison infirmary Saturday.

He was released from the University of Utah Medical Center earlier in the day.

Prison officials said other inmates apparently gave Gilmore the drugs he used in a deliberate overdose last week but there is not enough evidence to file charges against the inmates involved.

Gilmore has demanded speedy execution and has fought attempts to appeal his case. He has said he wants to die rather than spend the rest of his life in jail.

Gilmore, convicted of first-degree murder in the slaying of a Provo motel clerk and awaiting execution Jan. 17, appeared glassy-eyed and unsteady as he left the hospital and got into a prison police car for the 24-mile ride to the prison.

Barefoot and dressed in white prison pants and a thin undershirt in 23-degree weather, Gilmore refused a wheelchair and walked the 20 yards from the car to the prison. Officials said they had forgotten to take a pair of shoes to Gilmore at the medical center.

Spokesman John Keahey said Gilmore may have taken the potentially fatal dose of phenobarbital 8 to 10 hours before he was found unconscious in his maximum security cell last Thursday.

He said Gilmore was "moderately cooperative" at the medical center and did not repeat the hitting, biting and spitting attacks on nurses who tended him after his drug overdose last month in a suicide pact with his girlfriend, Nicole Barrett.

Both Gilmore and Mrs. Barrett were hospitalized after their suicide attempts. Prison officials have said they believe Gilmore got the drugs for the first suicide attempt from outside the prison.

Deputy Warden Leon Hatch said Saturday that Gilmore would be held in isolation "for quite some time" and that only his attorneys and his uncle would be allowed to talk with him. He said there would be no personal contact, only conversation through an intercom system.

Hatch described Gilmore as haggard, gaunt and weak but said a doctor approved his request for a meeting with his attorney on Saturday.

It's official: Andrus named interior secy.

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Carter named Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus as his Secretary of Interior Saturday, then summoned two Washington insiders and a former Georgia judge, all possible choices for high-level appointment, for interviews.

In a rush of activity to fill his Cabinet before Christmas, Carter told a news conference he is at work on plans to create a new department of energy and natural resources. But he said he is not ready yet to name its head.

James Schlesinger, one of those summoned to meet with the President-elect, has been mentioned as a top candidate for the job. Carter praised his ability and background. "He's one of those that I'm considering to serve in the administration," Carter said.

Carter's efforts to name blacks and women to key positions apparently was delayed again as he met with Schlesinger; Theodore Sorensen, a former John F. Kennedy aide mentioned as a potential CIA director, and Griffin Bell, a former federal appeals court judge in Atlanta, reported last week to be a possible attorney general.

Carter introduced Andrus at the news conference, his third in five days to present appointments to his new administration. Andrus, who must be approved by the Senate, drew immediate plaudits from both environmentalists and industialists.

Andrus joins Cyrus Vance, designated secretary of state, Rep. Brock Adams, secretary of transportation, and W. Michael Blumenthal, secretary of treasury, in Carter's proposed Cabinet. That leaves seven Cabinet appointments to go.

At the sparsely attended news conference, which was broadcast by radio but not televised, Carter also said:

—He is weighing who should be FBI director. "One who is being assessed is the present director, Clarence Kelley," Carter said. He added: "I believe the FBI director ought to be selected by the attorney general and ought to be responsible to the attorney general."

Carter also said, "Frank Johnson is another person who I think would serve very well in that position." Johnson, a federal court judge from Montgomery, Ala., met with Carter in Atlanta on Tuesday.

At Fremont Junior High School

'Partnership' increases interest

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

A new program operating at Pomona's Fremont Junior High School may be responsible, in part, for the reduced number of suspensions on the south Pomona campus this year as well as increased interest in school by some of Fremont's more disadvantaged and troubled students.

The Partnership Program of the University of California at Riverside has come on to the campus to offer intensive tutoring in English, math and science both individually and in groups to some of the school's less distinguished students. Offered free to the Pomona School District, the program is funded by the university and the state legislature.

Ron Wilson, the Parntership Program coordinator at UCR describes the program as offering tutors "sincerely interested in motivating junior high school students in both English, math and science as well as career education."

Given a budget of about $16,000 this year, Wilson has brought 40 tutors from UCR to junior high schools from Pomona to San Bernardino. Tutors are selected from the UCR student body, but are not necessarily teacher prepatory students. Some, said Wilson, are pre med or pre law students working on work study programs. Others are paid for their time while some just volunteer. The program stresses the use of minority group counselors for minority group students, but not exclusively so.

Wilson says the idea is to offer intensive tutoring for disadvantaged students in junior high school in order that they start thinking more about school and the possibilities it offers.

At Fremont, there are four counselors working with 30 to 40 students some of whom have behavioral problems or learning problems. The program is not all minority based, says Wilson, because "This is a cosmopolitan world and you've got come up with ideas that relate to individuals, not just to races."

Wilson, a tall bearded black man from New York, says he could have seen himself benefitting from such a program. A high school dropout, Wilson later received a high school equivalency degree going on to major in literature at Bard College in upper state New York and receive a graduate degree from Claremont Graduate School.

"A typical day for one of our students may include tutoring as well as a trip to a university campus," he said. "A lot of these kids never get a chance to go to places like that. We had a kid playing tennis at UCR last week who had never had a chance to play before and we had a real instructor giving him lessons."

The Partnership Program also tries a variety of methods in career education introducing kids to different jobs through everything from field trips to films to comic books.

"I had one kid who told me he didn't need the program because he was going to make a lot more money than me as a garbage collector in San Francisco," said Wilson. "Well it's true that a San Francisco garbage collector does make a lot more money than I do, but the next day I walked up to that same student, handed him a civil service test and said, 'Here, can you pass this? You have to if you want to be a garbage collector.'"

At this time, says Wilson, his program is tutoring to 700 school youths from Pomona to San Bernardino and beyond. In addition to his work as an administrator, Wilson visits parents of the students, many of whom, he says, are ignorant of their child's performance in school prior to his arrival.

"We've received excellent results, " he said. "The president of the Perris Valley Board of Education was so enthusiastic over the that she is now a tutor in it.

With increased funding, Wilson hopes he can enlarge the program next year. The Partnership Program as Wilson runs it is not open to students in any other assistance program except for some Emergency School Aid Act programs.

"I want the people and the kids to know that we aren't going to be one of those programs that comes in and is gone in no time. My tutors are required to sign on for at least two semesters. I've obtained letters from David Saxon, president of the University of California, endorsing the program."

Wilson said, "The student who is unmanageable, hard to motivate and below his grade level in academic work is the kind of student we're after. These students may be potential high achievers, who, with special attention, might better demonstrate their abilities."

On-the-spot opportunities

Christmas season prime time for most job-seeking students

For college and high school students who want to work next summer, Christmas time is also the season to begin hunting for those jobs.

"If students wait until June, they take pot luck," warns Bylle Whedbee, career planning counselor at Pitzer College.

Her advice: Use vacation time to gather information on jobs, hiring practices and names of employers. Pull a resume together and make as many contacts as possible.

"Students seldom think about approaching friends and relatives for information about jobs," Mrs. Whedbee added. "But the reality is that the most effective approach to job hunting is personal contact."

And Christmas vacation provides ample opportunity to renew ties with old friends, meet new people and visit potential places of employment.

"Holiday parties and vacation trips are great for making contacts and for finding on-the-spot opportunities for inquiring about summer resort work," Mrs. Whedbee said.

The idea is not to exploit friends and relatives, she added, but to alert them to the fact that the student is looking for a summer job and to ask for their advice.

Before embarking on a serious job hunt, however, students need to think about what they want to do during the summer, and about the skills and interests they can offer an employer.

"The 'I'll do anything' approach seldom pays off," the counselor said.

After focusing in on the job the student is looking for — whether it involves manual labor, office work, or whatever — then it is useful to compile a resume based on summer job objectives. Mrs. Whedbee suggested listing relevant class work, club activities, volunteer activities — anything that demonstrates responsibility and shows that the student has something to offer the employer which matches the job he is seeking.

And the students should be sure to clear with his references before listing them on the resume, she suggested.

Friends and relatives often help in establishing a network of job contacts by referring students to business associates or friends who can give them additional information.

When arranging for an interview, it is helpful to give the name of the person who referred you the student, Mrs. Whedbee said. It is important for the student to make it clear that he is simply interested in obtaining information and is not seeking employment.

Interviewing for information can be both fun and profitable, said Mrs. Whedbee.

"Most people welcome the opportunity to share their ideas and expertise with students and often provide valuable insights about hiring practices, types and availability of jobs in their fields.

"Before entering the doors of any organization or talking to people students need to be aware of working ethics and styles." Summer camps for example, would place less emphasis on dress than a business office. Males particularly, need to consider hair length — it does matter.

Mrs. Whedbee added this advice: Dress appropriately for your interview; be on time; call if for some reason you have to cancel the appointment; thank the person for their time and help. Courtesy is appreciated.

If a job requires tests (the Summer Civil Service exams for example) now is the time to take them.

Mrs. Whedbee listed waitress and construction worker as the most lucrative summer jobs.

"Some students do find jobs as life-guards, tennis instructors and camp counselors. There are a few summer internships for those students interested in gaining future career experiences. But jobs are scarce in all categories."

Occasionally, students who have been involved in work study programs during the academic year or volunteer work in social service areas, find that they are asked to continue in their job during the summer months on a paying basis.

Often, students must create their own jobs and for those who take this route, Christmas vacation is a prime time to survey community needs.

Mrs. Whedbee said that students have often provided valuable community services by establishing day-care camps, dance-therapy classes and shipping services. Operating a catering service for children's birthday parties is another idea that has been successfully tried by students.

For students taking more traditional paths, the old rules still apply: write thank you notes to the people who give you help and advice as well as those who interview you for jobs. (But keep those businesslike.)

And then follow-up vacation leads or ideas after returning to school. This includes writing, calling or visiting the most promising leads and sending letters of recommendation or a resume if appropriate.

Yule activities slated locally

A variety of activities will be offered at the Washington Park Community Center in Pomona during the Christmas vacation period, announced Al Erby, director.

The center will be open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and activities offered will include crafts, sports, a talent show, miniature golf trip and a party.

For information, persons may call 620-2305.

Boys Town

Historic institution changing

EDITOR'S NOTE: It's Christmas time, and Boys Town is raising money again. But the directors of the famous old institution are careful to point out now that every nickel raised is spent, and then some.

Boys Town — Spencer Tracy would not recognize it

Boys Town has come a long way since Father Edward J. Flanagan started it as his "Boy's Home" in 1917 with five homeless boys in an Omaha house.

Public donations and an enterprising sense of business has built it into a 190-acre establishment with an endowment fund that comes to $1 million an acre and a total worth of $240 million.

Remember: "He ain't heavy. He's my brother," and the picture of the young ragamuffin carrying his sleeping brother? That was the classic image of Boys Town. But today the orphans are different.

"We're dealing with what I call 'social orphans,'" says the Rev. Robert P. Hupp, the 61-year-old director. "When Flanagan started the home, an orphan was someone that the rest of society didn't want. Today, adoption lists are so long you don't see orphans anymore."

Today's Boys Town residents are the products of alcoholic or divorced parents and broken homes who "have gotten into trouble or are sure rehearsing for it."

The Rev. John Farrald was an orphan who graduated from Boys Town in 1940. He now directs one of the four "communites" of the new Boys Town.

Today, less than one per cent of Boys Town's 400 boys are real orphans. All but 17 per cent come from one-parent families.

Boys Town officials admit there have been discipline problems until very recently.

Father Hupp says that when he took over in 1973, the boys "didn't know what discipline was. The list of AWOLs was long by the time I got in in the morning."

Many blame Hupp's predecessor, the Rt. Rev. Nicholas H. Wegner, who was 75 when he retired.

Administratively, things began to suffer as Wegner got older," says Father Farrald. "We also lost priests because the Archdiocese (of Omaha) just had a shortage ..."

The school went to a system of cottage counselors, but the counselor "was more or less there to yell fire," says Dr. Lonnie Phillips, who came to Boys Town last year to direct its youth care program. "He didn't hassle a kid because he wanted his eight-hour shift to go smoothly."

"Kids were sullen, the cottages, were dirty," Phillips says. "Boys Town had a good academic program, but the rest of the school was in deterioration."

Phillips ordered a renovation of cottages and construction of 16 new homes that will open early next year, housing no more than 10 boys per unit. He closed the cafeteria and laundry, saying a family atmosphere cannot be maintained if boys shuffle in line to eat and send out their clothes. He fired many house parents and advertised for couples willing to spend 24 hours and some of their vacations with the boys as "teaching parents." They are required to train in a course worth 30 college credits toward a master's degree.

"The ship was sunk, as low as it could go, by the time Wegner retired," says Charlie Bagley, the 17-year-old mayor of Boys Town, who has been on the campus since his mother died 10 years ago, leaving him an orphan. "The training of the house parents has made a dramatic change. The kids now realize they don't just live here, they've got somebody behind them."

Boys Town is changing the way all child care institutions should, he says.

"The courts have held that you can't just warehouse a kid. You've got to do something for him, and you've got to attempt to do it close to his home," Phillips said.

So Boys Town is opening satellite homes. Each has a small group of boys and uses the "teaching parent." The homes are evaluated by a team of Boys Town specialists.

Six such homes are opening this year in Las Vegas, Houston and in Montana. Boys Town's investments in these homes, and in other projects, were stimulated at least in part from disclosures in 1972 that Boys Town earned or collected more money than it spent, despite the appeals for help at Christmas.

While Phillips arrived from the University of Kansas to direct child care operations, Dr. Ronald Feldman brought a string of credentials in social work research to the new Boys Town Center for the Study of Youth Development.

Feldman and a crew of researchers are operating in temporary quarters while they await the completion next year of a $10-million center that will house computers, a research library and accommodations for visiting research fellows.

Some $40 million was committed by Boys Town for the center, being built in Omaha, and for research at Stanford University at Palo Alto, Calif., and the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C.

Work at the campuses and the center will be aimed at developing better research methods, training graduate students development, and translating the results of translating the results of research into language and programs that can be used by parents and childcare workers.

Another new thrust at Boys Town is the Institute for Communication Disorders in Children.

"Many kids in trouble have problems communicating," says Dr. Patrick Brookhouser, director. "We're talking about the whole idea of communication, being able to take in ideas and being able to express them."

The institute, located temporarily at an Omaha hospital, has already treated 2,000 children with learning disorders associated with speech and hearing. Treatment ranges from surgery to speech therapy. Patients, rich and poor, come from around the country.

A staff of 60 is to operate from a new building scheduled for completion in January or February next door to Creighton University's medical school. It features family-size apartment units where children and their parents can stay while the children are treated.

But the new Boys Town has its detractors, especially on the issue of its wealth.

"You don't have to be poor to help the poor," says Hupp when asked about Boys Town money. "Flanagan started the foundation and refused to touch it because he wanted it to be there to run the home after he was gone."

Because of the construction program, Boys Town, which usually operates in the black, has a deficit of $1 million this year. That deficit should be cut to $500,000 next year, officials say.

"The endowment fund is about $190 million," says William Ramsey, who directs Boys Town fund raising. "It generates about $8 million or $9 million a year, or one-half our operating costs."

The rest comes from Christmas and spring direct-mail fund-raising appeals. These have raised $3 million to $4 million annually in the last couple of years, mostly through donations of less than $10. The total compares with $10 to $12 million annually in the years before the Sun Newspapers of Omaha, in a 1972 story that won a Pulitzer Prize, reported that Boys Town's endowment income and its fund raising had generated more money than the institution knew what to do with. Much of the wealth had been built up under Wegner, who took over from Flanagan in 1948.

As a result of the article, fund raising was suspended in 1973, but then was resumed.

HERITAGE — Rev. Robert P. Hupp, director of Boys Town, kneels at the tomb of founder Father Edward J. Flanagan in a newly built shrine. "When Father Flanagan started the home, an orphan was someone the rest of society didn't want," said Hupp. "Today, adoption lists are so long, you don't see orphans any more. . ."

Kissinger: 'Lone Ranger' of U.S. foreign policy

EDITOR'S NOTE: Kissinger's impact on American foreign policy is enormous, but there are mysteries about his private beliefs and his motivations — mysteries that might never be clarified.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry Kissinger, the "Lone Ranger" of U.S. foreign policy, leaves behind a record that is remarkable, a legacy that is uncertain.

His secret and celebrated negotiations for the 1972 nuclear weapons agreement with the Soviet Union, for the reopening of relations with China, and for an end to the Vietnam war, all conducted without the portfolio of secretary of state, established a mark for virtuoso diplomacy.

And once he moved into the job officially, becoming the most powerful man in Washington as the Nixon administration crumbled, his reputation as part-Superman, part-magician grew as he guided the Arabs and Israelis away from war and toward peace.

The "stable, new world order" that the former Harvard professor had set as his goal still eludes him at the end, as it did Austria's Metternich and Britain's Castlereagh, the 19th century masters of statecraft who influenced Kissinger's course.

But the world was at peace, and that, Kissinger has said, is "the most moral" goal of all.

Cyrus R. Vance, who comes after him, will suffer the fate of a great man's successor: large shoes to fill and the uneasy sense that someone's looking over his shoulder.

So strong was Kissinger's imprint on foreign policy that even the Carter administration, however much it intends to eschew one-man diplomacy and advance "morality," will be under its influence — in dealing with the Russians and the Chinese, in trying to head off a new war in the Middle East, in promoting black rule in southern Africa and a more equitable relationship between the industrial and the developing nations of the world.

Kissinger was fond of saying the United States could no longer operate with the supreme self-confidence that it is "the world's policeman" and predominant power, but he enhanced its authority among the Arabs and the black Africans while acrobatically balancing the Chinese against the Russians.

For a while, the traditional allies, western Europe and Japan, felt slighted, but in the end most analysts agreed that U.S. ties with them were strong.

The Middle East was most typical, perhaps, of Kissinger's range, stamina and persuasive skills, but also of the uncertainty of Kissinger's accomplishments over the long run.

Africa and the Third World typify, meanwhile, his flexibility and, again, his uncertain legacy.

Carefully calibrating U.S. military support for Israel so that the Jewish state would neither be overrun nor score a clear-cut victory, Kissinger, who is Jewish, then moved in to neutralize the Russians in Cairo by persuading Egyptian President Anwar Sadat that he could get Israel to pull back in Sinai and on the Golan Heights front with Syria.

Kissinger accomplished what he had promised. Through painstaking "shuttle diplomacy" he first separated the tangled Israeli and Egyptian armies along the Suez canal, and then worked out a series of interim agreements that returned some territory to Egypt and Syria in exchange for a promise from Cairo that it would tone down its economic and propaganda warfare against the Jewish state.

Kissinger's involvement in southern Africa and with the so-called Third World came late and represented a shift in his thinking. The dissolution of Portugal's empire and the intervention of Russia and Cuba on the side of black insurgents convinced him that the United States must pressure Rhodesia to yield political power to its black majority and South Africa to relax apartheid. The alternative to negotiated concessions, he warned, is race war.

His interest in economic theory and in the plight of underdeveloped countries also came late, but by the end of his tenure it had become almost a preoccupation. The United States took the lead in international conferences on the prices of raw materials and fishing rights, declaring that this, after all, is an interdependent world.

Kissinger's quest for "global stability" permeated his dealings with Moscow and Peking. Detente — an easing of tensions with the Soviets — produced the 1972 treaty limiting the two powers' missile defense systems and missile launchers, a ban on most weapons tests and a spate of agreements ranging from cancer research to the docking of spacecraft. Balanced against this was the 1972 opening to China after 22 years of hostility.

The strategy was to trade western technology and acceptance for Moscow's commitment to a more peaceful world, one that could begin to emerge from the shadow of "nuclear holocaust." As Kissinger frequently reminded critics: "Each side has the capacity to destroy civilization as we know it."

That capacity remains, with the growth of new weapons systems unchecked because of a deadlock over terms for a new strategic arms limitation treaty. Detente has been damaged by what the Ford administration sees as Soviet adventurism in Angola and its "mischievious role" in Rhodesia's racial strife.

To get as far as he did, Kissinger had to overcome opposition within the Pentagon and among hardliners who said that he had allowed the Russians to catch up with the United States militarily and did not apply enough pressure on Moscow in behalf of eastern Europeans and Jewish dissidents.

Claremont schools steeped in fertilizer, lime, paint . . .

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

How does a unified district such as the Claremont School District use six tons of lime or seven tons of fertilizer or 1,242 gallons of paint in one year?

Walter Montgomery, who heads the maintenance, operations and transportation department for the 6,000-student district, had ready answers to that question, as well as an explanation of the purchase of 700 cases of paper towels, 180 flats of plants, 130 trash cans and 748 projection bulbs during the past school year. the past school year.

He said the district employs at least 75 to 80 persons in the mot program, including 12 groundsmen, 34 custodians, and 14 maintenance persons.

"It is not unusual to use three tons of fertilizer each fall and spring on our athletic fields," he said. "The football field at the high school often gets an extra shot."

As for the huge supply of lime, Montgomery explained that all fields for competition sports at Claremont High are lined with lime. Even band practice requires the use of lime on a field.

The staff uses 343 gallons and 132 pounds of all kinds of herbicides at the various buildings to control weeds.

Forty-five yards of top dressing, top soil with fertilizer, are used to help grass grow, he said.

The staff last year planted 180 flats of plants, 161 shrubs and nine trees in the district's landscaping program, Montgomery explained.

As to 130 trash cans, Montgomery noted that the county fire department did away with plastic containers because they will burn.

"Although the plastic containers would last forever, we had to convert to the corrugated container," he said.

Montgomery explained that the district slowly is doing away with incandescent lights and going to fluorescent bulbs because the former are energy-wasters.

"Several schools still have incandescent lights," but we are in the midst of a replacement program," he said.

Montgomery said the district also is replacing its room clocks, some of which are the originals installed when the schools were built.

The district bought 58 last year, and will purchase another 67 this year.

He said that 98 per cent of the room clocks are tied in to a master clock in the school office, and are programmed, so they must be replaced by school.

The district staff last year used 565 gallons of floor finish and 94 gallons of carpet cleaner.

"Teachers love carpeting because of the acoustics, and because it adds warmth and color to a room. The kids can sit on it," Montgomery said.

He said that the district repairs its own clocks, furniture, audio-visual equipment, business machines and such other work larger districts might contract.

"We have our own carpenters, plumbers, locksmith, heating and air conditioning men," Montgomery explained.

"We contract less than most districts," he said. "We have the talent to do most anything that must be done. Being a small district, we are a close-knit group."

The only things that keep the district staff from doing more is the lack of time and money.

Among the projects completed last year at Claremont High were the remodeling of a sound booth in the music building and renovation of the football field, and installation of the following: speed bumps and paving of two planters in the parking lot, a railing between the 500 and 600 quad areas, an eye wash in the 400 quad, exhaust hoods in two rooms, electrical circuitry in Room 501 and the language lab, gas lines for a new kiln, and a water heater in the orthopedically handicapped area.

At Vista School, the staff installed a closed circuit television system, an exhaust fan, and fiberglass for the kindergarten area patio overhang, as well as construction of a concrete stage, the planting of several trees, and the painting of the entire exterior of the school.

All other buildings received similar maintenance and improvement projects.

This week two men began an extensive project which should take them until March of stripping all the floors and cleaning all the carpets.

Montgomery said that many staff members work four 10-hour days and are able to work weekends to do such things as paint when school is not in session.

"We're a service-oriented department, and we're happy to serve," Montgomery said.

Aged swim coach counts

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP) — At 85, Edith Hurlbut says she's stopped counting how many people she has taught the basics of swimming and lifesaving. But the number's over 1,100 and still growing.

"All I know is that some of my old students have grandkids that I taught," she said. "You are never too old to learn to swim. Tell senior citizens that if they don't know how and really want some fun, they ought to start learning."

Her current teaching post is the Hastings YMCA, where she serves as a volunteer twice a week at swimming and life-saving classes.

Mrs. Hurlbut, a widow, said she moved here four years ago and was swimming in the YMCA pool one day when "they saw me ... and asked me if I'd teach one of the Y secretaries to swim."

The Y's director, Gordon Metzger, said, "I just don't see how anyone could have an older and more active institution on the staff. She's still so sharp and has things completely under control."

Mrs. Hurlbut said that as a young woman she "just paddled around," and didn't learn to swim properly until 1920. She studied life-saving in 1928 at Lake Taneycomo, Mo., and took a refresher course in 1946 in Como Springs, Utah.

Her late husband's railroad job took them to several towns in several states, and wherever they went she taught her skills.

"I never competed," she said. "I don't care about speed. I always am more concerned with life-saving."

She said "swimming is the best darn fun there is" and regrets only that it "hasn't kept me slim like it used to."

Other favorite pastimes like roller skating, skiing, horseback riding and tap dancing are now just memories, she said, because "I think too much of my old bones."

Black flight from cities

'As soon as they can afford it—they're gone...'

EDITOR'S NOTE: There are those in the black middleclass who stay in the cities because they believe it is their social and political responsibility. But they are in the minority, bucking the growing migration of blacks with money to the suburbs.

JONATHAN WOLMAN
AP Urban Affairs Writer

Black middle-class families — fleeing crime and seeking better schools for their children — are moving out of the nation's large cities in growing numbers.

They are following millions of whites who have moved to the suburbs over the past three decades.

"Blacks have the same aspirations as most whites," says Craig Avery of the Los Angeles planning department. "They're looking for better value for their dollar; they want upward mobility." Says a New Orleans planner: "As soon as they can afford to leave, they're gone."

The number of black families leaving the cities is becoming a growing concern for city officials, uspet over further erosion of both the tax base and talent from the cities. Many central cities, especially in the Northeast and Midwest, already have lost much of their white middle-class tax base and can ill afford to see well-to-do blacks move to the suburbs.

An Associated Press check of major cities found "black flight" in metropolitan regions ranging from Newark to Los Angeles, including Atlanta, Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, St. Louis and Washington, D.C.

A U.S. Census Bureau official says the trend is national, although some areas are exceptions. Boston officials, for example, said blacks are not moving into outlying areas, with one civil rights leader explaining, "There is more segregation now than before between the city and its suburbs."

Migration of whites from the cities is now well documented. In the 1970 to 1975 period, suburban areas gained 12.7 million persons while losing 7.3 million. Central cities lost 13 million and gained only 6 million. As for black migration, the census bureau says there's no question it's occuring, but the exact numbers leaving and other data won't be known until the 1980 census.

"Any estimate of changing city populations would show, I'm sure, that more large cities have started to show an overall migration of blacks during the past five years," says Larry Long, a Census Bureau population specialist. But he concedes, "Between census years, one has to rely on hunches and interviews."

Black flight is most visible in two cities with large black middle-class populations, Washington, D.C., and Detroit — communities where street violence is common in black neighborhoods and public education is considered far from adequate.

"If it's not one thing, then it's another — crime, schools, fear. I'm leaving," said a Washington attorney who is buying a home in Montgomery County, Md. "Parts of D.C. are safe," he said, "but they're mostly all-white anyway, so why stay?"

Some middle-class blacks who have moved to the suburbs say the move into predominantly white areas hasn't been easy.

One prominent black who moved back into Detroit from a suburban town recalls, "No matter what, I knew out there I was just another nigger.

"You can run," he says, "But you can't hide."

City officials view the flight of the black middle-class as another symptom of urban financial problems. While the nation's cities want to improve services to become competitive with suburbs, they can't because they don't have the money.

Bernie Moore, spokesman for Newark Mayor Kenneth Gibson, says:

"When people feel they can get better services — schools, health, police, housing, public works — and a better lifestyle, they move. Let's face it, when a guy starts making $25,000 a year, he's gone."

Gibson is seeking to upgrade city services "so people would move only for a choice of location, not for a lack of services."

A report by two Brookings Institution researchers, comparing 56 cities with their suburbs, found only 10 cities that compared favorably in such key areas as employment, housing and income.

The movement of blacks from the central city to the suburbs isn't new, but it has accelerated with the growth of the black middle-class and the desegregation of once all white towns. In some of the older suburbs surrounding St. Louis, Detroit, Los Angeles and Atlanta, blacks are becoming the majority.

In the Chicago area, black flight began years ago and now is bringing a second generation of blacks to several older suburbs.

Many blacks are reluctant to leave the city because they are comfortable in their neighborhoods, and because they believe a committment to the city is a necessary social or political statement.

Francis Kornegay, director of the Urban League in Detroit, says successful blacks should set an example for inner-city youths, but he doesn't advise against black flight.

"It's a human urge as a person climbs the economic ladder to spend and get his best for his family. And where is the best now? In the suburbs."

Students culture shocked at Eton

LONDON (AP) — The elite students of Eton are adjusting to perhaps the greatest cultural shock in the school's 536-year history. They are making their own beds.

Dusting, sweeping and cleaning their rooms are other chores undertaken by most of the 1,200 boys as an economy measure.

The move, estimated to save the school about $50,000 by reducing the number of chambermaids, has received guarded acceptance from the mostly well-heeled students, whose past ranks have produced the likes of Lord Byron, the Duke of Wellington and 20 out of the 47 prime ministers since Walpole.

"What a bore it is having to do the chores which never troubled us before," commented the latest editorial in the school magazine, Eton Chronicle.

"But is it realistic to keep as aloof from present-day conditions as we were? Is this move a bad thing when the days of servants are now past, except for a tiny minority?"

The school's bursar, Richard Symes-Thompson, said: "So far I have had no complaints from the pupils, so I presume they accept it as a fact of life."

Nearly 10 per cent of Etonians come from abroad, and the current annual cost is $3,213.

'Secret of universe'

Legionnaires' disease still medical mystery

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer

TISSUE SAMPLES — Dr. Phillip Nash, chief of viral diagnostic services of Pennsylvania, displays rack of some of many from lung, kidney, spleen and liver tissues from legionnaire's disease cases.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Scientists have tested tissues samples, programmed computers, examined victims' lungs, interviewed hundreds of people and even turned over rugs to find the cause of Legionnaires' disease. They haven't had much luck so far.

"As a people we are not acclimated to failure," says Dr. Leonard Bachman, state health secretary. "But we should keep in mind that God, in all his omnipotence, has not yet deemed it appropriate to share all the secrets of the universe with us."

So the research continues for the cause of the epidemic that killed 29 persons and sickened 151 others after an American Legion convention here last summer.

And the researchers are being pressured for a solution by a scolding U.S. House subcommittee on consumer protection that feels the medical community, especially the federal Center for Disease Control (CDC), loused up the mystery disease investigation by not reacting quickly enough to certain possibilities, like poison.

"To be charitable, they botched it up," Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., the subcommittee's chairman, said during recent hearings in Philadelphia.

For close to five months now the medical community has been hunting for the cause, ticking off one suspect after another, only to eliminate it later. To date, the CDC has written off viruses and other contagious agents as culprits and is skeptical of toxins.

"All laboratory findings have given no evidence of a known infectious disease," says Dr. David Sencer, the CDC's director. "No toxins (poisons) are known that characteristically mimic the clinical, epidemiological and pathological findings of Legionnaires' disease."

The U.S. Army indicates it wasn't an agent of chemical or biological warfare.

"I'm a little concerned that we've eliminated all causes," Dr. Horatio Enterline of the University of Pennsylvania medical school said at a seminar last month. "Either there was no epidemic, or we're all wrong."

The studies have left little unturned. Investigators have even looked under the rug for dust samples in the lobby of the Bellevue-Stratford hotel where the Legionnaires met July 21-24.

Hundreds of constants and variables have been diagrammed and charted. Slides of the victims' lungs, some resembling charred Brillo pads, have been flashed on screens at seminars.

Fifty-four consultants have been utilized in one way or another by the CDC to review field investigations by the 32 CDC staffers dispatched to Pennsylvania.

What has all this told the investigators?

"All we know is that the evidence points to the fact that Legionnaires' disease was derived from a common source and was not spread from person to person," says Bachman, noting that hotel employes and most other guests were not stricken. "We do not understand why the disease was so selective, so discriminatory in seeking out its victims.

"We may very well be dealing with a new causative agent or a causative agent that has been with us for some time and was previously diagnosed incorrectly.

"We have no way of knowing how many physicians over the years have listed viral pneumonia on death certificates when in fact they were dealing with the same causative agent that exacted its toll in Philadelphia this summer."

Bachman says medical detectives have found no correlation between food and liquor consumed at the hotel, ice in drinks, the use of air conditioners in the hotel rooms or the victims' proximity to pigeons outside (the disease psittacosis is transmitted through bird droppings).

He says there has been no conclusive data uncovered to link water consumption at the hotel, a Philadelphia landmark which closed Nov. 18, a victim of bad publicity over the outbreak.

"All in all more than 15 broad-based epidemiological investigations have been conducted thus far, along with thousands of laboratory tests for viruses, toxins and other known agents by all parties involved," Bachman told Rep. Murphy's subcommittee on Nov. 23. The CDC linked the Bellevue to the epidemic by stipulating that to have contracted the disease a person had to have visted the hotel.

It also said repeatedly that "four activities were found to have some degree of association with the illness: over-all time spent in the hotel, time spent in the lobby, attendance at the hotel's hospitality rooms and drinking water at the hotel. It says it doesn't know why.

Holiday drunks treated earlier

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

Holiday drunks have always been a social problem, but now they are being more easily recognized and — in many cases — treated earlier.

"I'd like to think this is because alcoholism has been identified as a illness and the victim is seeking care," says H.H. Hannah, community services coordinator at the Careunit program at Ontario Community Hospital.

"Formerly, alcoholism programs would be flooded in January with victims who'd been drunk during the holidays and sought help," Hannah adds.

"Last year and this year, however, we are having people seek help to meet their problem before the holiday season gets into full swing."

Hannah said that an increasing number of the victims are women.

"We probably have no more women alcoholics in the community than we've ever had, but now the family has stopped hiding and protecting the secretly drinking mother or housewife.

"These women were easily concealed in the past because they did not have to face employers, a time clock or the highway patrolman," Hannah says.

He adds that the holidays, with an increase in social activities and pressures, often plunges the secret drinker into the spotlight.

One woman told Hannah "I love to entertain over the holidays. While I'm in the kitchen mixing drinks, I can easily sneak in extras for myself.

"My husband can't understand how I get high so fast since everyone has had only two drinks."

Another woman being treated for alcoholism said she loved to serve Christmas eggnogs since no one could tell how heavily she poured brandy into her own cup.

Hannah said when Alcoholics Anonymous was founded in 1939, only about one person out of five attending meetings was a woman.

"It's only a gut feeling, but I'm sure the percentage of women drinkers was much higher, they were just hidden."

In the past many women alcoholics died needlessly from alcoholic-related illnesses, because no one in the family would admit there was a problem, the coordinator adds.

But since the American Medical Association in 1967 said that alcoholism was a disease, it has been easier for families to admit that mother may be an alcoholic.

"Just as we don't know the causes of many other diseases, the causes of alcoholism are still a mystery," an Hannah adds. "We know it's allergy, and that alcoholics are addicted to the thing they are allergic to."

He adds that some people become addicted to alcohol the first time they have a drink, while other can drink moderately for 30 years before becoming an alcoholic.

"Alcoholism is a treatable disease and is no more a sign of weakness or moral dissipation than diabetes or measles," Hannah adds.

The Careunit (Comprehensive Alcoholic Recovery Environment) at the Ontario hospital treats the disease in a medical setting. Because patients are treated in an acute hospital, many are covered by their insurance.

Hannah reports that 95 per cent of the alcoholics are functioning members of the community, both men and women, and are frequently covered by some medical insurance program.

"The typical alcoholic is not a skid-row bum slumped in an alley," Hannah adds. "It's more apt to be the animated hostess surging her guests to have "just one more" drink before leaving."

Informational material is available to anyone interested in learning more about alcoholism by calling the Careunit program at 984-2205.

Further information may be obtained by calling the Alcoholism Council of East San Gabriel and Pomona Valleys, at (213) 331-5316.

A new booklet is also available from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. A copy of "Alcohol Abuse and Women," may be obtained by sending 55 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 38E, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Legionnaire's disease

Pennsylvania has spent $500,000 probing the illness, according to Ray Cole, the chief investigator on the subcommittee that is investigating the investigators. Cole says the CDC says it has spent $28,000 so far, excluding salaries.

Meanwhile, mice at the CDC lab in Atlanta continue to drink Bellevue-Stratford water with no apparent ill effects.

The CDC has begun a new study of survivors, described by a spokesman "as just another look to see if anything can be pulled out of that information."

A collection of specimens from pneumonia cases in Philadelphia that predated the Legionnaires' disease outbreak are being studied to see if there is a link between them and the strange malady.

At the University of California, Dr. Jerrold L. Abraham, a pathology professor, is employing a microanalytical method of searching for foreign particles in the lungs of several victims on the hunch the Legionnaires were exposed to toxic metal fumes. Some of the particles weight as little as a millionth of a billionth of a gram (a gram equals .035 ounces).

The Franklin Institute in Philadelphia is breaking down freon, the coolant used in the air conditioning system at the Bellevue to see if it contains harmful compounds. Lab animals will be subjected to the results.

The Franklin Institute research was prompted in part by Lorne Cook, an independent consulting chemist from Hockessin, Del., who contends the Legionnaires were wafted with poisonous phosgene gas.

As he sees it, the air conditioning system at the Bellevue leaked freon into a room where cigarette-smoking Legionnaires had congregated. The heat from the cigarettes, he says, helped break down freon into phosgene.

"The symptoms of the later states of inhalation poisoning by phosgene showed a marked similarity to symptoms exhibited by Legionnaires prior to their deaths," he says.

But that's just one of many theories.

One of the most publicized is that of Dr. William Sunderman Jr. of the University of Connecticut medical school. He feels nickel carbonyl could be the culprit.

"Analyses that were performed in our laboratories demonstrated increased concentrations of nickel in lung specimens from five of the six patients with Legionnaires' disease whose lungs were sent to us," he told Murphy's committee. "It is suggestive evidence that the patients may have inhaled toxic nickel carbonyl."

And not all the theories come from the medical community.

George Chiavetta, a Legionnaire from Lawnton, Pa., raises the possibility of sabotage.

He says that during the convention he overheard a glassyeyed man with a flushed face muttering: "It's too late. The Legionnaires are doomed."

He said that when the man left the Bellevue-Stratford he had a pouch-like device in his breast pocket with what appeared to be a tube or wire leading to his right hand.

There was no police investigation of the report at the time.

Employe theft set

GARDEN CITY, N. Y. (AP) — There are 415 known ways to steal money and-or goods from employers and new methods are being discovered almost every day, according to a recent study by the Dale System, Inc.

"A clerk in a busy New York City candy store under-rings every sale by one penny and takes home $5 a day — for 22 years. A super market manager in Oklahoma City sets up his own cash register at peak periods and in three months collects $75,000 his employers never knew about," noted Dale statisticians.

Sky cops — 'Big Brothers' or guarding angels?

Poll finds popular support for 'that fellow in the sky'

COPS IN THE SKY

Deputy Mike Cordua, a nine-year veteran of the San Bernardino County sheriff's department and observer in the helicopter program for three years, discusses the pattern of flight patrol in the West End with Sgt. Jon Gibson, an experienced pilot, military trained and now with the sheriff department aerial program as a line supervisor.

By MAE TATE
PB Staff Writer

"I don't mind that fellow in the sky at all."

These were the words of a Montclair woman who was among the many supporters of the West End cities of Chino, Montclair and Ontario's participation in the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Office helicopter program. She joined other residents and law enforcement agents who feel the benefits of the aerial patrol far outweigh any negative effects.

The Montclair City Council will discuss the helicopter program at its Monday night session. The discussion was set for the agenda after Jack Adams, a perennial opponent of helicopters and other aspects of police tactics for the prevention of crime, appeared at the Dec. 6 meeting to once again protest. Adams' protest was colored with barbs against police and city officials and staff.

Adams has claimed on numerous occasions that no one likes the helicopter program and charges that it is a communist tool and the public is threatened by its use.

In a random sampling — calling 44 persons from telephone listings — all but three wholeheartedly supported the "cop in the sky." Three persons were undecided.

And a sheriff's department survey of residents in the participating cities of Chino, Colton, Fontana, Loma Linda, Montclair, Ontario, Redlands, San Bernardino and the county areas show that 90 per cent of those sampled support the program.

"There are times when the top of the house seems like it's going to come off, but it's necessary because pretty soon the police cars come," the woman continued. "And then I know there's something going on. I don't mind that fellow in the sky at all."

One Montclair man said that the helicopter "disrupts my television. But I'd rather have my television disrupted than not have that helicopter up there." He added that it has been a real boon in other cities and the noise is merely "a necessary evil."

Sgt. Jon Gibson, a line supervisor of the sheriff's program that is coordinated by Capt. Terry Jagerson, commander of the sheriff's avaition division, spoke highly of the helicopter patrol. He pointed out that "even the criminals we arrest give us begrudging compliments. They say they never could have gotten away with the helicopter on the job."

The value of the helicopter is "the visual picture it creates," according to Montclair Police Chief Ray McLean. "It's an elevated observation platform."

"We see it as an innovative tool for the cop on the beat," said Chino Police Capt. Tony Linza. "It helps him right there on the spot. They can cover a school complex in 30 seconds and with the trained eye of the observer see anything unusual or wrong."

Capt. Wayne Simmons of the Ontario Police Department said the helicopter has been particularly helpful to his department that must deal with 32 square miles of territory, much of which are vast areas with few people. The helicopter provides easier and more effective patrol of the Ontario Motor Speedway, Ontario International Airport and other areas that are not easily accesible by ground unit, he said.

The helicopter program originally began in 1971 with two Bell 47 models. Gibson explained that these helicopters proved to be somewhat inadequate because they were slow and could not carry enough radio equipment to cover all the cities in the county. So the sheriff's department wrote another application for a federal grant to obtain two Hughes 500 C models.

In making the proposal, the entire valley from the Los Angeles County line to the San Bernardino-Redlands area was considered.

"We decided that in the next 10 years or so most of this valley will be cities, not county area. So we came up with this joint city-county program and the program was set up so all the cities would benefit and nobody would be left out," Gibson said.

The grant was approved in early 1974 and began with matching dollars from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) for implementation. The cities and county this year assumed the full cost of the program without federal participation. The estimated cost this year is $319,000.

The formula for contribution from each participant is based on population, FBI crime statistics for rates of major crimes and land areas. The contributions are $100,133, San Bernardino County; $12,900, Chino; $12,184, Colton; $16,429, Fontana; $4,405, Loma Linda; $12,938, Montclair; $35,858, Ontario; $22,267, Redlands; and San Bernardino city, $84,560. Rialto will enter the program in January at an estimated cost of $18,025.

Six pilots and four observers alternate on two shifts per day, seven days a week throughout the east and west valleys. On Friday and Saturday nights, there are two ships flying. They always operate on an on-call basis 24 hours a day. Sgt. John Hunter, a second line supervisor, Gibson and Jagerson also serve as pilots when necessary.

All of the pilots in the program are ex-military combat trained pilots with a minimum flight time of 3,500 hours and a maximum of over 6,000 flight hours. Each of the observers is a highly trained and seasoned sheriff deputy with a minimum of five years experience in law enforcement procedures.

Simmons noted that the sheriff's department has a "stringent maintenance program on the ships. They're not allowed up until they're in tip top shape. And the pilots have considerable experience. Poor maintenance and pilot error are the primary problems with helicopter crashes and the sheriff's department has eliminated this as much as possible."

Gibson agreed, saying that a large percentage of the $319,000 program is spent on maintenance, labor and parts. "We have one of the finest maintenance force that you'll find anywhere. We've never had any catastrophic failure. And I don't believe it ever will," Gibson added.

Sniper fire is always a possibility, Gibson continued, but such problems are very slim. If ground fire did become a reality, the pilots who were trained under combat situations would handle it expertly and "it's not likely that these pilots can be shot down with a 22," Gibson said.

All of the police coordinators agreed that the helicopter has a great deterrent effect.

"You cannot assess the crime you have prevented," McLean said. "In terms of reduction of residential

Crossing bridges:

Claremont students 'span' learning gulfs, discover scientific concepts

By GEORGE MacLAREN
PB Staff Writer

Have you ever seen or crossed over a bridge, and wished you could design one like it?

If you are a student in Baldwin Eckel's science concepts class at Claremont High, you are given that opportunity.

And you also were given the opportunity to test the completed bridge model to see if it would pass the pressure requirements Eckel set up.

Eckel recently gave each student 100 toothpicks and told each to design his own bridge any way he desired.

The teacher put only two conditions on the bridge design. It must be at least 25 centimeters or 10 inches long and be able to stand two kilograms or 4.4 pounds of pressure for its designer to receive a passing grade on the project.

To get the designer an A grade the bridge would have to bear 6.6 pounds or three kilograms, Eckel said.

He explained that the science concepts course is geared to familiarizing the students with the elements of the metric system.

Eckel did not help anyone. "They develop their own concepts by trial and error," he explained.

Of course, not all the first attempts at making a bridge model passed the rather rigid test Eckel set up.

Anyone who thought his bridge model would pass the minimum test was invited to place his bridge over the space between two table edges, with only the points of the model touching the table.

A large can was suspended by string from the center bed of the model and the student, with Eckel and fellow students lending moral support, gradually filled the can with water until both weighed 4.4 pounds.

A sigh of relief or a cheer went up from the student as he saw that his model did not bend under the added weight. Then he began to add still more water to see how much more weight the bridge could take before it buckled.

The students used their imaginations and also remembered how bridges they had seen were designed in making their models.

They were allowed to take their models home to work on them.

Eckel also showed the students how to build an elementary set of scales by which they could weight themselves in kilograms "more accurately than on your own bathroom scales."

"We like our students to enjoy themselves while they are learning," Eckel remarked.

A IS FOR ANXIOUS

Baldwin Eckel's class at Claremont High was recently the scene of suspense and excitement as students tested homemade toothpick bridges. At left, Eckel observes as student John Blincow successfully tests his log-like bridge. At right, he shares an anxious moment with Mike McCarthy during the testing of his traditionally-shaped span.

Hike in water rates set for consideration

A water rate increase for Pomona, which could hike the typical home water bill by $1 per month, will be considered for adoption by the Pomona City Council Monday.

If adopted as recommended, the proposed increase would raise the average home's bi-monthly water bill from around $8.78 to about $10.85.

The increase is needed, according to James C. Lundie, acting water department manager, to generate additional revenues for operation and maintenance of the water system in the city over the next several years.

The increase is expected to boost overall revenue for the water department by about 26 per cent.

Other agenda items for the 8 p.m. meeting include council review of a proposed predisposition agreement between the city and Vanir Development Co. for the development of the northwest corner of Mission Boulevard and Garey Avenue.

Although the agreement does not finalize the Vanir project, City Administrator Jerrold Gonce indicated the company and city are still talking in terms of a two-story, 40,000-square-foot structure, housing a bank, possibly a restaurant, and offices.

The proposed development is within the city's Redevelopment Project Area 1, with the agreement calling for Vanir to pay $250,000 for the 1.68 acres of land.

Why the Jews want a home

A lot of things happened in 1492: The last Moslem stronghold in Spain was overthrown and the nation united under King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella; Columbus was dispatched to find a shorter route to the Indies and the Jews were kicked out of the country.

In the intervening 484 years, a trickle of Jews apparently managed to slip back into Spain because today there are about 12,000 of them in a population of 34 million. Only within the past 10 years, however, have they been permitted to practice their religion. And only the other day were they permitted to hold their first legal meeting, other than worship services, since Ferdinand and Isabella — a conference sponsored by the World Jewish Congress and attended by 70 delegates.

This greatly distressed a number of Arabs, whose ancestors once ruled a large part of Spain (and, ironically, granted the Jews greater tolerance than they were to know in Spain for five centuries).

Arab ambassadors denounced the meeting and demanded assurances from the government that it was a strictly private affair. A couple dozen Arab youths demonstrated outside the Madrid hotel where the meeting was held protesting the "imperialist, Zionist, reactionary conspiracy against Lebanese Palestinians."

The possibility that the expulsion of the Jews from so many countries over the centuries, and their routine persecution where not expelled, may have had something to do with the Jewish desire to re-establish a national homeland in the Middle East seems to escape the modern Arabs, as well as a lot of other people.

Advantage of breakdowns

Kipling needs updating: If you can keep your head while others about you are losing theirs you must be living in a mental hospital, my son.

According to a psychiatrist at the Lebanon Hospital for Nervous and Mental Disorders in Beirut, one of only about 10 psychiatrists in the entire country, the need for tranquilizers and other psychoactive drugs to treat the hospital's patients actually declined during the 19-month civil war.

"While the supposedly normal people outside were acting insane," he says, "our most disturbed patients became calmer in the midst of the worst gunfire. They watched television, played games and helped the staff."

It seems to have overtones of "Catch 22," but in reverse, and might be humorous were it not for the very real human tragedy of that bitter conflict.

The Lebanese medical profession expects a marked increase in mental health problems now that the fighting has ended and when, as another psychiatrist puts it, "people settle down and can afford the luxury of becoming emotionally disturbed." He guesses that 25 per cent of the population, especially in ravaged Beirut, will have breakdowns and hysterical manifestations that will require hospitalization.

Remember those pictures of Lebanese youngsters barely larger than the rifles and machine guns they carried? The war's long-lasting effects on them alone are incalculable.

Think on these things

Negative enthusiasm is the approach used by those who eagerly tell you why you cannot accomplish what you have set out to do. Their game is throwing obstacles in the way of doers with the words, "I don't want to discourage you, but . . ."

Negative enthusiasts are armed with every kind of argument that sounds logical and reasonable, but there are just some things that do not respond to ordinary logic — they cry out for someone who can think outside of the boundaries of reason, someone who will not back away because of statistics. Great success comes to those who can see beyond — beyond the negative words, beyond what appears to be, beyond the doubts and warnings. Successful people listen to that voice within them that says, "You can do it — don't stop now!"

If you can remember with vivid clarity your most embarrassing moment, you know it can spring into the conscious mind at the most unsuspecting moment. Usually it is something that should have been forgotten eons ago, but the habit of hiding bits and pieces of little happenings, ignorance and accidents merely makes them available to cause that red face all over again.

Just realize that the past is gone. Even 30 minutes ago you were a different person. To realize this helps to erase things best forgotten. Those things can never hold back the new person that is now taking life in stride. Henry Ward Beecher once said that good humor makes all things tolerable — so chuckle about it and then forget it!

Praise for Indian Fair

Dear Editor:

On Oct. 6, a letter to the editor was printed in the Progress Bulletin regarding the National Indian Fair held in Building 5 during the Los Angeles County Fair. The author of this letter, Connie Bell Napolitano, seems to think it is not an Indian event. However, the participating exhibitors include the following: Kent Walker, Navajo; Allen McCabe, Navajo; Barbara Wilson, California Mission; Dusty Tallman, Sioux; Jim Leos, Cahuilla; Al Golding, Quechan; Sen. Tom Lee, Navajo; Jesse Loco, Apache; Art Tafoya, California Mission; George Gill, Cherokee; Robert Payne, Cherokee-Cheyenne; Anthony Andreas, Palm Springs Cahuilla; Harold Richter, Nez Perce; Tony Region, Navajo; Ernest Magginni, California Mission; Russell John, Navajo; Floyd John, Navajo; Louie Morgan, Navajo; Harry Yabeny, Navajo; Roger Tsabetsaye, Zuni; Bernard Dawahoya, Hopi; Mike Chee, Navajo; Frank Chee, Navajo, Sylvia Laycock, San Juan Pueblo; Martin Martinez, Navajo; Joanie Jamison, Seminole; John Begay, Navajo; Tony Purley, Laguna Pueblo; and Augie Edwards, Sky City Pueblo.

The few booths not manned by Indians were stocked with North American Indian hand crafted arts and crafts, supplied by reservation Indians who do not have enough individual merchandise to stock a booth. This is one of the few places in the United States where the customer is reasonably certain of genuine Indian goods.

The participating artisans include the following: Mel Ahhaitty, Kiowa/Comanche, bead worker; Ernest hunt, Navajo, sandpainter; Deloris McCabe, Navajo, rug weaver; Regina Pino, Pueblo, pottery worker; and Seraphine Antone, Papago, basket weaver.

The National Indian Fair has the support of Navajo Arts and Crafts Enterprises, Zuni Arts and Crafts Association, Zuni Coop Association, Colville Confederated Tribes, Hopi Arts and Crafts Association, Dawa's Hopi Arts and Crafts, Chactaw Arts and Crafts.

The advisory council includes the following: Roger Tsabetsaye, Zuni Pueblo; Al Golding, Quechan; Jim and Ann Leos, Cahuilla; Pattie Chachulski, Apache; Lynn Chachulski, and Joanie Jamison, Seminole; and Vern Jamison.

The director, Tony Purley; the executive assistant, Katherine Anderson; the public relations person, Mary Buck; and myself have invested in excess of 1,500 hours each, and several thousand dollars of our own money, in an effort to give the Indian a market place for his goods. The proceeds from the fried bread concession went to the Indian Center for a Christmas Party for the Indian children.

All of the 150 participating Indian dancers and 30 drummers are Indians, from various tribes and various parts of the nation. The inter-tribal pow wow officials are: Mel Ahhaitty, Kiowa/Comanche, head drummer; Greta Logan, Comanche, head woman dancer; Raymond Naoni, Comanche, head man dancer; and Howard Yakus, Comanche, traditional whip man.

I am sure Dr. Hatfield teaches an excellent course and we could all learn a great deal from it. However, in no way can it qualify anyone to pass judgment on this type of presentation. In fact, this is the sort of misunderstanding, the brief glimpse, the instant summation, the quick impression and the printed word, that has cost the American Indian so much for so long. I would think we should have learned better by now.

I would like to extend an invitation to Mrs. Napolitano to visit next year's fair and take a closer look at the "behind the scenes" heartache, hard work, sweat and tears that goes into this type of production.

In the meantime, a congratulations and an apology and thanks is due to the Los Angeles County Fair Association, the Indian community and all those who have worked so hard to make this an outstanding event and the success it is.

Public guardians change roles

WASHINGTON — The cozy relationship between the regulators and the regulated has become an open secret in Washington.

The regulatory agencies wield tremendous power, affecting the profits of great corporations and the pocketbooks of their customers.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, for example, can authorize billion-dollar mergers between railroads. The Civil Aeronautics Board decides which airlines will get the choice routes. The Federal Power Commission fixes the rates that millions of consumers pay for gas and electricity.

These are merely a few of the powers of the commissions, which are supposed to protect the public from exploitation. Yet these public guardians are virtually ignored by the public and besieged instead by the favor-seekers.

Even more disturbing, top executives rotate between industry and government until it is sometimes difficult to distinguish the watchdogs from the people who are supposed to be watched.

The revolving door between government and industry bears closer watching during a political changeover. If the patterns of the past prevail, a number of corporate executives will wind up regulating the industries they just left. And more than a few federal officials will go to work for companies that benefited from their government decisions.

The conflict-of-interest statutes prevent an ex-official from approaching his former agency on any matter that he handled while he was there. Indeed, he is forbidden for one year from taking up any matter at all that was under consideration during his employment.

Unfortunately, this still leaves a lot of leeway. It is quite legal, for example, for a past official to lobby his former agency on matters that didn't come up while he was there. He can seek favors from his former associates, including underlings whom he hired and promoted. Or worse, he can grant favors while he's still on the government payroll and, later, accept a high salary or fat fee from some company he favored.

Here are a few recent examples of the movement between government and industry:

—The Securities and Exchange Commission regulates the stock market. Yet James Needham stepped down from the SEC to become chairman of the New York Stock Exchange. Thereafter, he often represented the stock exchange before his former colleagues at the SEC. "I didn't feel any conflict," Needham told us. But he conceded: "I realize the public perception may be different than mine."

—Ex-Food and Drug Commissioner Charles Edwards, after changing sides, is now in charge of food and drug quality assurance at Becton-Dickinson Company. He recently appeared before his former agency to discuss the medical devices his firm makes. "I've given our company a much better attitude toward government regulation," he said.

—Carl Bagge was a Federal Power Commissioner before he joined the National Coal Association. He pointed out that the FPC doesn't regulate the coal industry, although its decisions have an indirect impact on the industry.

Hundreds of administrators have ridden the government-industry merry-go-round. With each turn, more regulators become regulated and vice versa. This is bound to erode public faith in the regulatory agencies. And doubt in the integrity of administrative action poisons the wellsprings of government.

For the good of the nation, the regulatory agencies need to function with the independence of courts.

Footnote: President-elect Jimmy Carter is drafting tough new regulations to curb the traffic between industry and government. And Rep. Andrew Maguire, D.-N.J., has asked the House Investigations Subcommittee to hold hearings.

Santa dazzles with gadgets

Santa's elves now need doctorate degrees in the sciences.

A catalogue of gift suggestions for this Christmas includes innovative materials and sophisticated gadgets that were not available just one Christmas ago.

Yet when I mentioned this to an electronics researcher of my acquaintance, he said, "Wait'll next year!"

And he gave me a sneak peek at NEXT year.

Just 10 years ago any available electronic calculator was a crude, bulky machine which had to be plugged into the wall and cost at least $150. We thought that was no miracle!

This Christmas I see a miniaturized and refined computer — with a memory — better, smaller and battery-operated — for $13!

The take-it, develop-it and see-it-now cameras are 10 times better than 10 years ago and half the price. Thumb through any catalogue of gift suggestions and you'll find in Santa's bag an assortment of delights, the names of which were not even in the dictionary just a few months ago.

Quartz crystal timepieces, more dependable and more accurate than any heretofore.

Sunlight and moisture sensors for house plants representing a fortune in research: $14.95.

You can turn any piece of paper into elegant embossed stationery with a desk-top device costing $16.

Calculators, recently room-size, are now squeezed into the handle of a ball-point pen.

So soon you and I have come to take for granted such things as microwave ovens and ultra suede which is more beautiful and pliable than leather, plus washable . . .

C. B. radios and dial car phones and "boxes" which answer the telephone and record messages for you . . .

Already we accept with nonchalance the benefits of selective water filters for the kitchen sink and highly sophisticated smoke detectors for the bedroom . . .

The right-now coffee makers are already commonplace . . .

But there are products tested and proved and going into production for NEXT Christmas which will boggle our minds, if only for a little while.

You are by now well aware of the several varieties of electronic TV games — the devices which can be wired into your TV set allowing persons or partners to play a variety of games involving skill and dexterity.

About half of these are Japanese imports.

By this time next year Santa will be delivering an infinitely more refined version of these games.

The new ones will incorporate a miniprocessor — a small computer with peripheral equipment — and a memory capacity so that IT CAN RESPOND INTELLIGENTLY.

A "smart game." It will be able to play chess against you.

Just in jest

We've got to give our scientists credit! No sooner does one of them take the joy out of life with upsetting news about some horrible affliction with which mankind is threatened than along comes another scientist with the reassuring news that he has discovered a cure for the first scientist's newly discovered ill.

So, just in case you are worried over a statement recently released by the National Institute of Dental Research to the effect that kissing can spread germs that cause dental cavities, I hasten to assure you that another scientist has announced an amazing scientific breakthrough which makes it possible for you to kiss and have good teeth too.

He has developed a new chemical which he claims should relieve all kissers of the fear of having to undergo the painful ordeal of a dentist's drill. They have only to spray his discovery on their teeth after engaging in osculatory activities and the decay will flake away.

Agonizing over illegal aliens

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — A man I know is breaking several laws of this country. He is an illegal alien, a citizen of Mexico come to Washington where the pickings are better. He works in a service station, and as far as I can determine he is in violation of U.S. immigration, labor, public assistance and tax regulations.

Yet I do not turn him in. He is a splendid man, cheerful and bright, and he has shown me photographs of his family back home. I like him and feel for him. I know he's wrong, but I'm not able to do what's right; indeed, I'm not even sure what is right.

In this regard I am something of a microcosm of the national attitude toward illegal aliens. Most Americans are at least somewhat aware of their increasing presence, and also of the grief they engender. We know we can't afford to be benevolent. We know we must stop the madness. We even know how to do it. And still we do not act.

Not that we haven't agonized to a good extent. According to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, as many as a million foreigners, mostly from Mexico, are silently invading the nation annually. Ten million may be here now, more or less permanently. Many states and the federal government call the phenomenon a crisis.

Already the illegals account for perhaps three-million jobs that would otherwise be available to legitimate residents. Vernon Jervis of the Immigration Department says at least one million of the jobs are substantial. And the work is not the only thing lost; much of the $3 billion to $10 billion earned each year by illegals is untaxed and sent by the wage earners to be spent in their home nations.

And, as things stand now, it can only get worse. For years immigration has admitted that its border patrol, though substantial, is unable to cope with the matter. Meanwhile, Mexico's population (now 60 million) is doubling every 20 years, pauperism there is common, the per capita GNP is a thin $740, space and resources are shrinking, and more and more peons are seeking relief in America.

Therefore the outlook is numbing. By 1980 there may be 15 million of them here, accounting for something like 6 per cent of the population. Combined earnings of the more fortunate among these may total as much as $50 million a day by some estimates. Others, less fortunate, will assuredly be causing havoc in the public hospitals, welfare agencies, jails and slums of a dozen or more affected states.

Also by then there may be additional misfortunes of a social nature. Last year disgusted farm workers in New Mexico set up a border patrol of their own, using violence, to flag the rush of illegals. Even now there are gangs of young bandits raping and robbing the legally defenseless aliens crossing the border into California. Authorities predict far more of this behavior as bitterness deepens.

But still, faced with this clear and present danger, America seems to be incapable of reacting quickly and effectively. Congress has wrestled with several bills — one of which would make the hiring of illegals a crime (as of now, it's not) — but to no good end. All the while, 3,000 more Mexicans arrive here every day.

The reason for our collective impotency is that we are in the grip of our own compassion. A law against hiring illegals, it's suggested, would be a burden on every Hispanic in the nation. The law might also place thousands of well-meaning employers in jeopardy. And then there are the illegals themselves; the U.S. Catholic Conference says we should grant the aliens already here a humane amnesty.

In the end, if there is to be an end to the invasion, someone will have to be hurt. Laws of such scope inevitably shatter the customs or conveniences of many. National identity papers? Greater regulation of business? More surveillance of one unfortunate minority? Then, too, if the cheap labor is one day kept out, every one of us may be stung by higher prices for our apples and lettuce.

What is right? Which answer is best? Don't ask me. I only know I enjoy my wetback gas attendant. I've no thought of busting him. Today I've given him a card for Christmas. Kindness is weak.

Don't gamble on pet gift

Giving animals may best be dalayed until after Christmas. Put a stuffed toy pet or an empty aquarium under the tree with a note and gift certificate attached. That's far better for two reasons. One, the right pet may not be available just before Christmas and, two, the giver may not really know what the "right pet" is. That should be determined by the person who will receive it. It's not worth the chance of making a crucial error just to have the pet on hand at gift-giving time.

DEAR DR. MILLER: How long do puppies nurse? — C.S.

DEAR C.S.: Depends on a number of factors including, particularly, opportunity. Should ma's milk "evaporate" when they're only a month old, the youngsters, of necessity, will become weaned in short order. On the other hand, given the opportunity, they're likely to hang in there for twice that long. It's a good idea at around three weeks to provide some moistened puppy meal as a side dish so the puppies can begin to wean themselves — with increasing encouragement from mama — as the weeks go by. Most can get by on their own, albeit grudgingly, by the time they're six weeks old.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Easy, our cat, sneezes but only once a day on the average. Is that bad? — T.F.

DEAR T.F.: Not usually, though it could indicate anything from a chronic sinusitis to an allergy, or simply sensitive mucous membranes. Sneezing in series is usually clinically significant. Ordinarily a once-a-day sneeze wouldn't be, but next time Easy's at the doctor, mention it.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Lillian Leghorn, we call her L.L. for short, is a beautiful bird. She does have two glaring defects, though, her legs and feet. They're all thickened and scaly looking. We didn't even notice. We just naturally look at her beautiful eyes, until she started picking at them. Actually they're pretty repulsive. Is there some sort of a beauty cream we could use on them that would help? — E.B.

DEAR E.B.: The sooner Lillian Leghorn legs it (or, more logically, is carried) in to the doctor for appropriate treatment, the better. Beauty creams won't do it for Lillian. It's likely even the doctor will have some trouble restoring those feet and legs to their former glory (whatever that was). Odds are their present sad state is a reflection of a severe mite infestation, though there could be other causes.

Needs help, not interference

Dear Ann Landers: Our 17-year-old, Nora, is a high school senior. She went steady for seven months with Keith, also a senior.

Three weeks ago, Nora decided she wanted to go with others so she broke off with Keith, making it clear she'd date him from time to time, but not exclusively.

Keith's mother is determined to "patch things up." She immediately wrote Nora a long letter and sent her a beautiful sweater. She phones daily to report Keith is depressed or not "feeling well" and misses her terribly. All this pressure has made our daughter a wreck.

This evening Keith's mother came to our home and asked to see Nora alone. They visited for an hour. When she left, Nora was in tears. It seems Keith has developed a skin rash. The doctor says it's "emotional." The woman told Nora it is HER fault and she is morally obligated to go back to him "before he does something awful to himself."

Nora is beside herself. I am furious. My husband is fit to be tied. What should be done? — On The Spot In N.J.

Deat O.T.S.: A 17-year-old is no match for this aggressive woman. Invite her over and tell her in Nora's presence that you are sorry Keith is ill but Nora is not to be used as a drugstore prescription to cure her son's skin problems.

Explain that Keith's rash is not the result of Nora's rejection of him but rather his inability to accept the realities of the situation. Let her know that Keith must learn to cope with disappointment and frustration because he is bound to be faced with it time and time again in the future. The boy needs therapy, not a mother who runs interference for him.

Assure Nora, privately, that she is not responsible for Keith's problems and she must not allow his mother to make her feel guilty — no matter what.

Dear Ann: Recently a woman wrote to ask whether her sister-in-law was wacky because she wrapped the garbage in newspaper and tied it with a ribbon, sometimes "fussing with the bow for five minutes." You told her to relax with the knowledge that her sister-in-law had the most beautiful garbage in town.

You could be wrong. If the letter came from Chicago she has stiff competition. My wife wraps her garbage in gift paper left over from holidays. She also saves boxes and ribbon and especially enjoys surprising the trash collector with fancy "packages" from Marshall Field & Co. Any comment? — W.C.R.

Dear W.C.R.: No. I just wish I had some of that woman's spare time.

Dear Ann: My parents were divorced three years ago. It was a bitter parting and the wounds have not healed.

Their only grandson will be five years old next month and I am having a birthday party for him. Mother says she won't come if I invite her ex-husband. Dad is crazy about the boy and I don't feel it would be fair to exclude him. What should I do? — Split Head

Dear Head: Landers' Law: If a person says, "I won't come if you invite So-and-So" — THAT person should be told "Sorry, we'll miss you."

Inform your mother that she can come AFTER the party, enjoy some birthday cake and ice cream and have the boy all to herself.

Never too old for new friends

"People don't build new friendships at our age."

Is that a myth? Or is it reality? A little exploration of the question may be useful.

Too many of us seniors have accepted the phrase as gospel. Some of us, in fact, have used it as an excuse to lean on our adult children for emotional sustenance. The line is, "you're all we've got."

But what we have for our children and grandchildren isn't friendship. It's love. Nor can they truly appreciate our need to participate in their successes; our desire to help in their difficulties.

Friendship, on the other hand, is importantly different from blood ties. We choose our friends. We make friends. Friendship is always in motion. The family is always there. Circumstances that relate to time, place, interests and extraneous matters may enrich friendships or impoverish them.

Invariably as we grow older, therefore, the kind and number of our friendships change. Any of us, when old, may face a period when new friends must be found. For some of us, the finding of new friends may be the only possible mercy in a desperate flight from loneliness. When that need arises, it becomes important to disprove the myth that "people can't build new friendships in old age." We must prove the opposite.

We older people can make new friends and develop satisfying new associations. The operative words here are "make" and "develop." Friendships do not fall into our laps. Friendships do not just happen. Acquaintances we may find easily. People to meet with and talk with may be all around us. Certainly, we can pass time together. The question is, "What do we share, what can we give one to another?"

The act of sharing is colored with hope. It is the essence of friendship. It is one of the ultimate expressions of dignity. There are no people in anybody's world who are completely self-sufficient. To bring to others part of what they lack is the first rule in the establishments of friendships.

We can readily examine the sharing concept as it relates to older people. We are at our senior club bragging about our grandchildren. Our listeners wait impatiently for us to show our pictures and finish the lecture. Then it's their turn. No new thought, not one new act or feelings has been engendered as a result of that exchange. Nothing has really been shared.

Try another instance: Memory is one of the kindest of our blessings. We meet with a few people and reminisce about the "good old days." The experiences of each of those present are strangely similar. Their "good old days" were like ours in most respects. Then, perhaps, we settle into talk about the periods when things were rough. Everyone else had tough going, too.

True, we've momentarily escaped the present by dwelling on the past. But the present is where we're at. Swapping history is not sharing. Unless we can give someone a thought, a hope, a suggestion for living more happily today and tomorrow, the whole exercise is merely a passing of time together. Oh yes, it's pleasant enough. But it is not the stuff from which personal friendships grow. We can leave that company and repeat the procedure in other company or in different places. We won't make friends there, either.

One more example. Those who happily schedule bridge or canasta one day, golf the next day, some word games or other indoor competitive gaiety during the evenings are only sharing time. Everyone with whom we play competitive games faces us as an adversary and lasting friendships do not develop from such repeated competition.

Society forces us, the aged, to spend our time in each other's company. We can either huddle together. Or we can work together and share ourselves. Making new friends among our contemporaries requires a positive approach. The first act of kindness to another leads to a response in kind. If it does not, there is always another contemporary who will welcome a warm sense of support.

No guarantee of good health

DEAR R. LAMB—I would like to know if it is safe to marry a man who has had a stroke. I have known this man for five years. He had his stroke about the time I met him.

He is not a bad-tempered man. He is most kind, doing things for me and taking me places. At times he has an unfair outlook on life. He thinks everyone should baby him. His family does. I can't see this as I think it unfair. He is a strong man. His stroke left him with part of his throat uncontrolled, and this affects his speech. He has a bad temper when this happens.

Please let me know what to do as he gets irritated when he has speech problems. His stroke didn't leave him disabled in any other way that can be seen. He is in his 70s.

DEAR READER — From a health point of view it is never safe to get married. You could marry the most healthy looking person in the world and something could happen — such as the onset of severe psychiatric illness or the occurence of a cancer or a tragic accident leaving a mate paralyzed from the neck down.

You have to decide if you want to have a life contract to help each other no matter what, and you never know the WHAT until it happens. If you love someone you will want to help them during his or her difficulties whether they are emotional, physical or financial.

The practical side of a marriage contract says that you should know what the other person's health problems are, before you decide if you want to take on that responsibility. When a person is in the 70s there is the ever present danger of a sudden health problem. That is true whether or not a stroke has occured.

Personalities change with age — which may be for better or worse. Such changes occur in younger people too but are less apt to become a problem. I think when anyone marries an older person it is important to ask yourself if you are willing to take care of this person if he becomes disabled.

The answer to your question may also relate to your own health. How old are you? What do you want out of a marriage? Are you in the age group that you may have an increased risk of health problems? Are you concerned about whether or not he will be able to look after you if your health takes a turn for the worse? It is not a one-sided question that you pose.

Certainly health problems should be discussed before marriage, because of the impact they may have on both persons' lives. There should be no surprises. Honesty about health is essential, and both individuals should have a physical examination before a marriage. I think this also includes young people. Then the decision can be based on facts, and plans for the future can be realistic.

I haven't answered your question because you have not really told me what you want out of a marriage or what you are bringing to the marriage. All I can do is suggest that you discuss the problem and that both of you know what each other's health status really is. Then the final decision has to be up to the two of you. But don't just ignore the health matter. Clear the air before the ceremony rather than regret it afterward.

You need more information about strokes so I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-5 on this subject. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped self-addressed envelope for it. Just send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Sharks can bite without turning

Theorists once believed that sharks have to turn upside down to bite. That's not true, certainly. It is true, though, that sharks don't like to expose their heads or bodies above the water, and they probably wouldn't break the surface with their fins, either, if they weren't so stupid. Anyhow, that's why they do indeed turn upside down when they seize floating food. In the depths, they don't bother with such athletics.

Foresight went into the founding of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, sure enough. Please note, Atlantic and Pacific. It started on the Atlantic in 1869, but despite the name, didn't open a store on the Pacific until 61 years later.

BACKWARDS

Q. "What's the only sport in which the team has to move backwards to win?"

A. Only sport? Tug of war and rowing. Any others.

If you can spare a minute — I mean exactly 60 seconds — you might use it to reflect upon the fact that during that time worldwide about 200 babies are being born.

Argument continues as to how old a car must be in order to merit the designation of "antique." But a lot of collectors still insist that no auto made after 1924 should be called so.

Some cigarette makers hereabouts for many years have advertised that their smokes are rich in Turkish tobacco. What they rarely mention is that Turkish tobacco contains practically no nicotine.

THE HARD FACTS

It was in 1965 that Congress exempted the Amish from paying Social Security taxes . . . That chinese booze called Mao Tai is more than 130 proof . . . If you want a room to look larger, paint the baseboards the same color as the rug . . . The word "fall" is older than the word "autumn," considerably older . . . Did I tell you Americans spend twice as much on pet food as they do on baby food?

If you tend to identify the British as tea sippers, bear in mind the people per capita of no other country in Western Europe drink as much instant coffee.

Q. "What's 'drumhead justice'?"

A. That's a quick trial which is not necessarily fair. The army years ago court marshaled in the field sometimes, using a drumhead as a table for the judges.

One government study indicates it costs almost $16,000 to drive a standard-sized car for 10 years or 100,000 miles.

Glad you asked

Q: Is the "feud" between Jimmy Carter and the Johnson family over now that he apologized for some disparaging remarks reportedly made about LBJ? — S. Fisher, Flagstaff, Ariz.

A: Probably. Carter was also complimentary to LBJ — when he told Sanford J. Ungar of Atlantic magazine: "I can see in retrospect what President Kennedy meant to the deprived people in this country and abroad . . . He never really did that much for them, but he made them think he cared. Lyndon Johnson did far more for our people . . . but he failed to reach them as Kennedy had!"

Carter also said: "Harry S. Truman was my favorite President, and was so years before Truman came back into vogue among Democrats and Republicans alike. He was humble and courageous . . . He had vision about the future — in handling Europe, the United States, Israel and Gen. MacArthur . . . He was meticulously honest and truthful. I don't believe he ever lied to the people . . . and I've never had that feeling about any President since."

Q: Why won't Barbra Streisand permit her sleep-in hairdresser-director-boyfriend to be interviewed on TV? — L. P. Graven, Cincinnati.

A: But she does. Jon Peters, Barbra's beau, will let his hair down with another Barbara (Walters, that is) in mid-December. While not a regular on the talk show circuit, Peters has been on TV before.

Q: Is that so-called "Legionnaire's disease" still a mystery? — Mr. & Mrs. Darnell B., St. Louis.

A: At this writing the answer must be yes. "It may remain a mystery forever," says Philadelphia's acting health commissioner, Dr. Lewis Polk. During the outbreak of the disease (following the July 21-24 Legion convention), Dr. Polk recalls, he was asked what would be the worst possible outcome. "To never know the answer to the disease. This may come to pass," he replied. "However, we now know a hell of a lot of things that it is not!" (Footnote: The latest casualty of the "Legionnaire's disease," apparently, is the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, a gracious Philadelphia landmark. It has been closed and will be sold or demolished. Bankers Security, the major stockholder, has been losing $10,000 a week since the Philadelphia story first broke.)

Q: Before the introduction of supermarkets, what was the first chain of grocery stores launched? — Mrs. Diana Ringe, Detroit. A: The A & P (Atlantic and Pacific) stores — in 1864.

Q: Didn't Ryan O'Neal once go to jail on an assault and battery charge? — Mrs. L. Hirshorn, Knoxville, Tenn.

A: Yes. The "big fight" (not televised) occurred on New Year's Eve, 1960, when he got into a brawl with an over-aggressive stranger. Ryan won the fight but it cost him 51 days in jail. After getting out of the cooler, he kept his cool until he took a poke at a New Orleans newspaper editor. Penitent, the young actor vowed that from that time on, he'd "wait for the other guy to throw the first punch!"

Supreme Court non-doctrines

Women's rights 'movement' elated, deflated by rulings

WASHINGTON (AP) — For seven years, the Supreme Court under Chief Justice Warren E. Burger has studiously avoided developing a guiding doctrine in its consideration of womens rights.

The resulting case-by-case method has yielded decisions hailed by women. It also has recently produced rulings denounced by feminists, although the court's basic approach has remained unchanged.

The court's philosophy, or lack of one, is being examined closely because of the controversy following the court's ruling last week that employers who provide disability programs for their workers are not legally required to include pregnancy benefits.

Justice William Rehnquist, who wrote the majority opinion, acknowledged that "it is true that only women can become pregnant," but he went on to say that discrimination based on pregnancy is not sex discrimination.

Rehnquist said an employer whose disability programs excluded pregnancy benefits did not set pregnant women apart from men but, instead, from nonpregnant workers, including women.

Feminists who had been pleased with many of the court's decisions in recent years reacted with surprise and outrage. Attorneys most familiar with the women's movement labeled the decision a product of the court's patchwork approach to women's issues.

"The court hasn't found a theoretical handle on which it can hang its women's rights decisions," said Jill Goodman, an attorney with the American Civil Liberties Union. "The justices appear content to deal with cases on their particular facts."

Beginning in 1971, when it ruled that states cannot give a legal preference to men applying to become administrators of wills just because they are men, the court has applied a "rational reason" test on a case-by-case basis.

Under this test, a state must have such a reason to differentiate between men and women, the court's majority said then. Lack of that reason violates the 14th Amendment's equal protection clause.

That rationale has been used to uphold a woman's right to equal pay for equal work and equal opportunities in education and business but only on a case-by-case basis.

"The court won't reach outside of the framework of each individual case," said Ruth Bader Ginsburg, a leading women's rights attorney. "There have been no broad assumptions (in women's rights cases) that characterized past court decisions dealing with racial discrimination."

In a 1973 case, known as Frontiero v. Richardson, four justices wanted the court to take such a step and declare that sex discrimination would be treated exactly the same as discrimination based on race or national origin.

If a majority of the court had agreed, states or private employers making distinctions based on sex would have to prove some "compelling interest" in doing so. The burden of proof would not be on those charging discrimination but on those being charged.

Because the court did not agree, a state or company charged with discriminating against blacks 100,000 female employes, was an example of the court's limited approach to handling womens rights cases.

Referring to the court must prove it is innocent, but no such obligation is attached to a charge of sex discrimination.

The pregnancy benefits case, in which General Electric was charged with discriminating against majority in that case, Mrs. Ginsburg said, "They're either hung up on pregnancy or reluctant to strike down sex discrimination when serious costs are involved."

If the court had ruled the other way, it could have cost GE millions of dollars. The company also estimated that American industry would have to spend $1.3 billion a year to provide pregnancy coverage in existing disability programs.

Mrs. Ginsburg said her questioning of the court's desire to strike down sex discrimination against women when a big price tag is attached may be answered by the justices' decision in a case now before them.

Federal law requires widowers or husbands of retired women to prove they were dependent on their wives in order to collect Social Security benefits. No similar requirement applies for women, and the law has been challenged as discriminatory against men.

In urging the court to uphold the law, the Justice Department said that not to do so would cost the government an estimated $400 million annually.

"No one can predict how the court will decide," Mrs. Ginsburg said. "There's no reliable pattern."

Viennese vegetables

VIENNA (AP) — The city of Vienna is the largest supplier of vegetables in Austria, filling not only the needs of the city but meeting the requirements of half the entire country. Its produce market turns over 300 metric tons of vegetables daily, all grown within the city limits.

Record harvests could keep food bills from rising in '76

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Nineteen seventy-six brought consumers some relief from higher food prices and provided farmers with record harvests that should help keep supermarket bills from spiraling in 1977.

Americans also got additional protection from the government in a wide variety of areas affecting the goods and services they buy. But there were indications of a growing concern about too much regulation by Washington.

The slower rate of increase in the cost of food was in line with a general easing of the inflationary trend, with prices for all retail items increasing less than 6 per cent.

Food prices went up between 3 and 4 per cent in 1976 — less than half the rate of increase in 1975 and less than a third of the boosts in 1973 and 1974.

"Retail food prices . . . in grocery stores for use in the home have held amazingly stable in the past year," said Rex F. Daly of the Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service. "This was a year of big supplies of food crops and expanding output of livestock products."

USDA economists predicted a similar 3-to-4 per cent increase in 1977, thanks in part to corn and wheat harvests which, while slightly lower than anticipated in the spring, were still estimated at record levels.

There were some exceptions to the trend. Coffee prices — which started soaring with reports of a freeze in Brazil during the summer of 1975 — went up. And up. And up. By the end of the year, coffee cost from $2.25 to $2.50 a pound, up 50 or 60 cents a pound from the price 12 months earlier.

Shoppers with a sweet tooth also were out of luck. Sugar prices continued their decline from the record levels of late 1974, but cocoa prices soared and the new year is bringing the 20-cent chocolate bar.

Meat prices, particularly for beef, declined in 1976, but industry and government experts warned that next year would be different.

Cattle producers, claiming they are losing money, have cut back their herds, meaning fewer livestock going to market and higher prices for meat.

The USDA warned that the average retail price of a pound of beef might climb to a record $1.49 in 1977. That compares to a 1976 estimated average of $1.39 and to the 1975 level of $1.46.

Consumers, meanwhile, said they were concerned not only with price, but with quality. Market research studies showed Americans believe many products are not as good as they were five or 10 years ago and people are convinced that quality could be improved without any price increases.

Government regulatory agencies including the Federal Trade Commission, Food and Drug Administration, Consumer Product Safety Commission and Civil Aeronautics Board took steps they said were designed to upgrade products and services.

Both President Ford and President-elect Jimmy Carter expressed concern, however, about over-regulation, although they disagreed on what sort of protection is needed for consumers and how government should be reformed.

Ford said he was trying to cut down red tape in existing agencies, while simultaneously making them more responsive to individual complaints. Carter promised an overhaul of the entire bureaucracy to make it more efficient and expressed support for establishment of a separate, independent consumer protection agency.

One of the key areas where the government took action was in the field of the environment, specifically the ozone layer that shields the earth from the ultravilet radiation that can cause skin cancer.

Concerns had been expressed that fluorocarbons used as propellants in some aerosol sprays were damaging the ozone layer.

The National Academy of Sciences, in a long-awaited report, said that regulation would be necessary at some future time, but it declined to pinpoint the degree of danger that is posed or the date for restrictions.

The government decided not to wait. The Consumer Product Safety Commission started procedings to ban fluorocarbons in aerosols over which it had jurisdiction, and the Food And Drug Administration proposed requiring warning labels on sprays containing the controversial propellant.

Government actions also opened the way for increased marketplace competition in several areas. Fair trade laws, a Depression-era leftover which opponents called legalized price fixing, went off the books. And the courts and federal agencies moved to end prohibitions on advertising by professionals, including doctors, lawyers and druggists.

Humble bean nutritious

NEW YORK (AP) — The humble bean, long thought of as poor folks' food, actually contains more protein than beef or eggs, according to the Dairy Council of Metropolitan New York.

Beans contain about 22 per cent protein, compared with 18 per cent in beef and 13 per cent in eggs.

But since the protein 8that beaas contain is incomplete, unlike the protein in milk, fish, poultry, meat and eggs, beans must be combined with other foods to get their full benefits.

Tears in their beers

Barmaids topped in Bikini Tavern

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Maine (AP) — The new law requires modesty even on the sign at the Bikini Tavern. But that's not what's most troubling at what used to be the town's only topless bar.

There are tears in the beers because the law also prohibits the three barmaids from serving in their old unfettered fashion. They've been topped, so to speak, and neither customers nor barmaids like it.

"I know it's silly, but I feel like I'm trying to hide something," said barmaid Cindy Linscott, self-consciously running her fingers over the unfamiliar leather vest above her bluejeans.

"It just doesn't feel right wearing this," she said of the vest that doesn't quite cover what the new ordinance intended.

The 23-year-old brunette's unhappiness was echoed by the 15 loyal customers around the horseshoe-shaped bar Tuesday night as the law took effect. Perhaps unhappiest was the only patron who said he came expressly to see the barmaids.

"I'm 70 years old," he said. "Where else can a man my age see something as pretty as that without getting his face slapped?

"They're nice girls. They wouldn't do anything wrong, even if they were naked."

It was the local Kiwanis Club that thought the girls were doing something wrong just by being a little naked. It sponsored a hearing at which townspeople testified the topless bar could cause a decline in the already struggling beach resort.

The vote in the special referendum Monday was 1,089 to 613 in favor of the law requiring clothing of waitresses.

A for the patrons at the Bikini, they scoffed at the idea that Old Orchard could become a "sin city."

"All the new law has succeeded in doing is making the girls look more provocative," said a Portland lawyer visiting the bar. "Face it, bare breasts by themselves aren't very sexy."

Richard Gabrielle, owner of the bar, said he will comply with the law for now but does not rule out a future challenge to it. Other people have said the law is so broad it is blatantly unconstitutional.

Gabrielle, 50, opened the bar last year at a location at which he had operated, in turn and unsuccessfully, a fast-food restaurant, miniature golf course, furniture store and fruit stand.

"It's very simple, flesh sells," he said. "If I had some guy selling the beer, the most I could charge would be 50 cents a drink. But I've got some attractive girls who show a little flesh doing the selling, so I can get a buck a beer instead."

Gabriele says he runs a neighborhood bar: "My girls sell beer and beer only."

Police agree. Deputy Chief Paul Tibbets said he had no problems at the Bikini, but it was the chief who told Gabrielle the law will require touching up the tavern's sign.

Gabrielle said paint would add the necessary modesty to the unclad mermaid.

The year Jesus was born, 250 million people lived on earth. Their annual income (current dollars) was about $200 a year. By 1776, world population had jumped to 750 million but real imcome remained at about $200 per person, the Conference Board notes.

Nevada's future studied

New gambling spas worry game mecca

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — If history's any guide to the future, then Nevada should stay the nation's gaming mecca for years to come, with continuing stiff controls to keep undesirables out.

That's the view of both industry spokesmen and state gaming control officials, who point to many hassles already surmounted here since gambling was legalized in 1931.

The big test now for the billion-dollar yearly casino industry is whether it can handle a possible economic threat posed by New Jersey or any other state which might follow its example and legalizes gambling.

For gaming control authorities, the newest challenge is a court attack on "backbone" gaming laws designed to keep unsavory types from getting into positions of power within the industry. The issue is whether the laws violate due-process rights of prospective gaming licensees.

"There have been quite a number of important judicial opinions over the years, and we're still here," said Phil Hannifin, chairman of the state Gaming Control Board.

Even if that challenge leads to a court demand for changes in the law, Nevada legislators are expected to "cooperate fully with us in making any necessary corrections," Hannifin said.

Legislative leaders have already said they would not water down the gambling statutes if amendments are needed.

Les Kofoed, executive director of the Gaming Industry Association of Nevada, agrees with Hannifin on continued tough rules. He says the state "must have complete control over who gets in or not. Without very strict control we are in jeopardy."

He says the state and the industry are well practiced in fighting off legal or economic threats. "There's never been a time but what we didn't have one little brush fire to put out, only to find another one started someplace," he added.

At stake is the economic health of an industry which produces more than $1 billion a year in gross taxable revenues. That provides roughly half the money Nevada needs to run its state government.

Kofoed says casino gambling in New Jersey should have "very little impact" on the Nevada clubs.

He concedes a "different picture" would develop if widespread casino gambling was set up in many states but he adds that would take years to build up.

Cowboy Assemblyman Phil Tobin introduced the 1931 bill repealing a law which had been ineffective in controlling widespread illegal gambling in Nevada.

Tobin said in an interview before his recent death that he "never dreamed" the industry would get as big as it did in this state.

The industry first grew in Reno, in northern Nevada. But in the 1940s the Las Vegas area, in southern Nevada, started its rapid growth which has made it one of the major gaming centers in the world.

The change in the pattern of gaming growth included an influx of money from questionable sources in eastern states. So in 1945 the first big amendments to gaming laws were passed. The changes empowered the Nevada Tax Commission to impose rules on the industry and to issue state licenses.

Questionable characters were in evidence despite the controls.

Benjamin "Bugsy" Siegel built the Flamingo in Las Vegas in 1946. He was wanted for murder in New York and was said to be tied to mob interests in eastern states. He was slain in California shortly after his club was finished.

Casino growth continued at a rapid clip through the 1950s. It prompted legislators to again amend the gaming laws. In 1955 the state Gaming Control Board was set up to assume the gaming regulation which had been handled by the T Commission.

Other controls were also established in 1959, such as the tough investigatory and licensing provisions used by authorities.

Jaws grown tightly shut

Frail Irish lad given new image by doctors

By A. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Padraig McKenna was just a few months old when his jaws began to grow tightly shut. And his lower jaw failed to grow.

Later, doctors in his home in Ireland said it probably was the result of some strange infection.

The youngster lived on fluids and blended or mashed foods, sucked between nearly clenched teeth. He couldn't talk and it was hard for him to breathe.

Padraig became a frail boy, shy, withdrawn, embarrassed.

Last January, 10 years later, Dr. John Marquise Converse at New York University Medical Center cut away the abnormal bony growths that had frozen and sealed Padraig's jaws. Then he gave the boy a cheering prescription:

"Eat steak. And chew gum," for exercise.

Padraig had a pre-Christmas party Thursday at University Hospital, where he has had four operations on his face, all without fee. The boy, now 11, has grown taller and has gained about 10 pounds now that he can eat, and has a normal-looking lower jaw.

"He looks fantastic now. He wants to keep going places. He likes to play with kids his own age now," said his mother, Breda McKenna, who has been with her son in New York since "the miracle," as she puts it, began in January.

The mother and son won't be at home in Carrick-on-Shannon, County Leitrim, for Christmas. They'll wait until next month, when Dr. Peter J. Coccaro, an orthodontist, should finish straightening teeth that "had grown every which way," Converse said.

For the first year of Padraig's life, said Mrs. McKenna, "doctors kept telling us he was all right."

"When I came to spoon-feeding him, and had so much trouble, I thought it was my fault. He was my first baby." (There are four other young McKennas, born since to Breda and Patrick, the youngest 3, and all quite normal.)

"He never talked, until after one operation, in Dublin when he was about 3½. We had begun thinking there was something wrong with him. But then in a few weeks he began talking. It was all in there, in his head, and he just had to be able to let it out."

Padraig started school at about 5, his mother said, but "when he came to be about 7, other kids picked on him. When he was 8 or 9 he didn't want to go to school or to meet people. It took a lot of pushing to get him to go to school."

In the casual cruelty of children, Padriag was "Bugs Bunny" because of his protruding teeth.

His four operations were done at the University Hospital's Institute of Reconstructive Plastic Surgery, which is headed by Converse.

In Ireland, the family learned of the institute through McKenna's cousin, Mary McKenna, a registered nurse who lives in Jackson Heights, N.Y., and works at Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.

In time, money was raised or guaranteed by the Irish government and some Irish-American groups to pay for Padraig's trip and hospitalization. Paul O'Dwyer, president of the New York City Council who was among today's invited guests for the party, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., also helped.

The first operation last Jan. 21 freed Padraig's locked jaws. For Converse "it was something I had never quite done before" because there was so much bone to remove to free the hinges of the jaws.

In April, a temporary chin implant made of silicon was put in place, to stretch tissues around the tiny lower jaw.

In June, the silicon was removed and the boy's lower jaw was moved forward. A bone graft from his own body was used as an insert to place the jaw further forward.

Then last Oct. 6, bone tissue from the boy's hip was added on to make the jaw larger.

"He took it all quite well," said Converse. "He now has a normal size lower jaw for a boy his age. The grafted bone may not grow at the same rate as the bone in the upper jaw. We'll have to watch."

The non-profit institute is supported by grants from private foundations and government and public contribution.

Building a new, acceptable face after disfiguring accidents or birth defects is becoming an expanding skill in plastic surgery.

One beneficiary within the last year was Ida Hays of La Grande, Ore., who was born with her eyes set twice as far apart as is normal. The bony orbits of her eyes were moved together to the normal distance by a surgical team at the institute.

Breda and Padraig McKenna have stayed with Mary McKenna and with friends in Manhattan, with Padriag confined to the hospital for many weeks. Last summer, they had a seven-week trip home.

Breda McKenna has a Christmas problem.

She said she'd love to be back home with her other children, "especially since we've spent so long here. It's a long time to be away from them, almost a year. But it's an important year in Padraig's life. It's been a wonderful year."

Curbs feared in oil hikes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Arab nations will raise oil prices "to the point that the traffic can bear," but too steep increases may cause industrialized nations to curb their appetite for oil, a USC economics professor says.

Professor Nake M. Kamrany suggested recently that two factors that could have an effect on the size and timing of future price increases will be the speed of the West's economic recovery and efforts to find oil substitutes.

Furthermore, Kamrany told at international economic conference Wednesday in Marina del Rey, the member nations of the Organization of Pertroleum Exporting Countries want to be careful not to alienate the West and "provoke a military response."

Richard Day, chairman of the USC economics department, suggested that a major part of the impetus behind OPEC's hiking of prices was the realization that their oil supplies may run out in about 20 years.

Day said the United States should import as much OPEC oil as it can now "at any price" while at the same time stockpiling oil for the future by "keeping our oil in the ground."

Meantime, World Bank economists John Shilling and Nichols Carter said the OPEC nations "have far exceeded expectations in their import expenditures and have run out of their large monetary reserves faster than expected."

The two suggested that OPEC members could manage their wealth more adroitly.

5,000 West Germans

Nazi war criminals still haunted by retribution

LUDWIGSBURG, West Germany (AP) — Three decades after World War II, 5,000 West Germans are still subject to prosecution for Nazi atrocities. But because of poor health or a lack of witnesses, fewer than 10 per cent will ever stand trial, the government's chief war crimes investigator says.

Adalbert Rueckerl's Central Office for the Investigation of National Socialist (Nazi) Crimes has two more years to identify war criminals who have escaped detection. On Dec. 31, 1979, a once-extended, 30-year statute of limitations for wartime killings runs out, and the government no longer will be able to initiate investigations.

However, it will continue to prosecute some suspects unmasked before that date and to help authorities in other countries prosecute Nazi war criminals.

"The American Consulate in Stuttgart often uses our files for cases pending in the United States," Rueckerl said in an interview with The Associated Press. "And we send investigators to France, Poland, the Soviet Union and other occupied countries to cull their documents."

Except for Nazi victims who denounce the slow pace of justice, most adult West Germans are weary of war crimes trials and prolonged investigations, Rueckerl says.

"Yet I am encouraged by the increasing number of young Germans who are turning to us to learn the truth about a subject that is taboo in many homes and seldom discussed in school," he said. "They are a much more critical generation than mine was."

Rueckerl, now 51, was 20 when the war ended.

Operating out of this south German town near Stuttgart, Rueckerl's 87-member staff uses a million-card tracing file, a huge store of Nazi-era documents and tips from the public and foreign governments to track down suspected war criminals still at large.

War crimes convictions are declining in West Germany, and the last major trial of Nazi death camp guards has been under way for more than a year in Duesseldorf.

German-born Hermine Braunsteiner Ryan, a New York City housewife who was extradited to stand trial, is one of the 14 former guards at the Majdanek camp in Poland charged in the shooting, gassing and fatal beating of at least 250,000 Jews.

There were 19 war crimes trials and 43 convictions in West Germany in 1970, eight trials and 11 convictions in 1975 and nine trials and 22 convictions this year.

Rueckerl said this reflects the complicated preparations and expense of holding the trials in the cities where the defendents live, and the fact that prosecutors bring indictments only when they are relatively certain of a conviction.

"The average defendant is 65 or 70 years old and in failing health. He can often avoid prosecution by presenting a medical waiver certifying his unfitness to stand trial," Rueckerl said.

For a conviction, there must be conclusive evidence that the defendant was involved in an atrocity — copies of Nazi deportation or execution orders signed by or naming the defendant, or a minimum of two witnesses who can positively link him to a specific slaying.

"Most of the potential witnesses are elderly people living in foreign countries. They often respond to our requests to testify by saying they can't discuss a part of their lives they have spent 30 or more years trying to forget," he said.

Rueckerl said many lower-ranking members of Nazi SS (Elite Guard) execution squads have been acquitted by West German courts because they contended they acted under duress. They said they feared their superiors would have them executed if they refused to carry out the orders.

Of 81,000 German war crimes suspects investigated by the West German government, 6,411 were convicted, he reported. Twelve were executed before the death penalty was outlawed in 1949; 150 were sentenced to life imprisonment; 6,134 got long jail terms; and 115 got short terms.

U.S. authorities recently used the West German files to prepare deportation actions against three elderly Eastern European immigrants accused of collaborating with the Nazis.

burglary, it has been a concentrated area coupled with safety and lock programs. We have reduced the rate of residential burglaries, but cannot say how much of that was due to the helicopter."

In addition to preplanned patrol of schools, parks, business districts and problem areas, the helicopter has been significantly helpful in emergency situations such as armed robberies, felony car thefts, pursuits, mass disturbances and riots, crowd control, location of lost children and direct police intervention.

In June, a man attempted to commit suicide by lying down on the Southern Pacific Railroad tracks in Montclair. The helicopter pilot and observer spotted him, saw no ground units in the immediate area and so proceeded to land the aircraft and help a railroad employe pull the man off the tracks just before the train reached him.

The helicopter was useful in cornering escapees from the Youth Training School in Chino in a nearby cornfield this past September; and located two elderly ladies who had wandered away from a resthome in a field of high grass, injured and frightened.

Noise has been a problem, but as McLean views it, noise "is a relevant thing. All of us are attuned to a certain noise level that disturbs us. Barking dogs and my son's stereo disturb me. All of us have a different tolerance."

The helicopter normally flies at about 500 feet, but comes lower in emergencies. Oftentimes it is the helicopter unit that detects suspects who hide beside buildings and under shrubbery at night, under boxes and other materials that could not be detected by ground units. In one instance, the unit even helped corral nine stampeding bulls.

Gibson felt that the level of request for the use of the helicopter is indicative of the excellent performance of the program. The program coordinators did a survey of police officers in the participating cities to determine if they felt the helicopter made them feel more secure, made their jobs easier and if the program should continue.

The overwhelming response was that the ground officer's job was more effective, safer and provided a higher level of apprehension of criminals.

"I've made this analogy," said McLean. "If you're a carpenter, you can build a house with a hand saw, a number of nails and a hammer. You can do it a lot easier with a skill saw, an automatic nailer and a transit.

"I see the helicopter in the same vein. It's a tool that the police use and it makes them more effective. It's much the same as the car. We could put an officer out on foot, but with the advance of the car, he can cover more territory and provide more service."

Solstice rites slated Tuesday

Winter Solstice, the shortest day in the year, will be celebrated Tuesday at 3 p.m. with ceremonials in the Barrio Park, Claremont.

Richard Chase will coordinate the celebration which will include a six-man sword dance and the folk drama, "The Death and Resurrection of John Barleycorn." The spiral windup ceremonial dance will close out the event with on-lookers participating.

WHIRRING OVERHEAD

Airborne law enforcement officers cover miles of territory with expanded visibility. Working from the air gives them increased speed when they are involved in a ground search.

For Thalidomide baby

Driving is just another hurdle

By TONY LIOCE
Providence Journal-Bulletin

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Passing his driver's test was just one more hurdle in a life of obstacles for John Williams, born 17 years ago as a Thalidomide baby with no arms.

But for the state of Rhode Island, Williams is the first driver ever to steer a conventional car with his feet.

"He's better than most at parallel parking," said inspector Sal Mellone, who administered the test. "You've got to give this kid a lot of credit."

Williams was one of the many deformed babies born in the late 1950s to mothers who had used the tranquilizer Thalidomide while pregnant.

Many people without arms drive cars with steering "discs" installed in the floorboards. But Williams gets into a conventional car, kicks off his sneakers, takes the keys between the toes of his left foot to start the ignition, then moves his left foot to the accelerator. He moves the gear shift with his right foot, then uses the right foot to steer.

On Tuesday, he became the first driver in to pass a Rhode Island driver's test that way.

Williams, who lives in Portsmouth, said he was "pretty nervous" during the trip to the registry office from Greenfield, N.H., where he is enrolled at the Crotched Mountain Rehabilitation Center.

But Mellone said there was no sign of nervousness as Williams negotiated the 15-minute course through moderate afternoon traffic in downtown Providence.

After successfully turning the corner at Smith and State Streets, the young man climbed out from behind the wheel and said, "Well, I did it."

An official then gave Williams his license, and showed him three places to sign his name.

No problem. Williams sat down, took a pen between the toes of his right foot, and signed.

Then Williams walked into another room, paid the $8 license fee and posed for a license photo. He needed help only to get the $8 from his shirt pocket.

"I feel pretty good," he said. "I accomplished something today."

Besides driving and writing, Williams uses his legs and feet to shoot a bow and arrow and can sink basketballs from 20 feet.

At Crotched Mountai,, he uses his feet to communicate in sign language with his deaf roommate.

His teachers at the rehabilitation center, where he is studying to be a computer specialist, say there isn't much he can't do.

Cuddly teddy may be 'risky'

By LOUISE COOK

Warning: That cuddly looking teddy bear may be hazardous to your health.

That's the message from the Consumer Product Safety Commission, which has started another holiday campaign on toy safety.

Americans are expected to spend an estimated $5 billion on toys and games in the coming Christmas season alone. They also will spend about $20 million on Christmas tree lights — 35 million sets of them according to the commission.

Toy manufacturers started gearing up for the holiday early this year. Some 5,000 new items — many of them linked to popular television shows — were on display last February at the American Toy Fair in New York and the products are now on store shelves across the country.

Sales of toys, games and Christmas ornaments are expected to set a record this year, according to David A. Miller, president of the Toy Manufacturers of America. Miller has estimated that this year's sales will be 6 to 8 per cent higher than last year's.

While the manufacturers and retailers worry about profits, the safety commission worries about possible hazards. The federal agency estimates that 150,000 children will be seriously injured as a result of accidents with toys this year.

The commission has the authority to ban dangerous toys such as those containing rigid wires and sharp points. That includes stuffed animals and dolls that might appear harmless but contain hidden dangers.

Until two years ago, the commission issued a list of banned toys and volunteers patrolled stores looking for hazardous products. The list was dropped, however, and the commission says it has no plans to reinstate it, despite the protests of some consumer groups.

A commission spokes man said the banned toy list had several drawbacks. First, it was difficult to keep the list up to date. By the time the list was printed and distributed, some of the items already had been withdrawn from the market or changed in design to eliminate the hazard. This led to potential legal problems.

In addition, the spokesman said, the list was actually misleading to some people who assumed that any toy not on the list was automatically classified as safe. Not so. Many toys simply were not tested at all because of lack of money and staff.

The commission is now concentrating on educating the public with a variety of promotional efforts.

There are specific safety standards for some toys, mainly those involving electricity. All electrical toys must be labeled with a warning message and a minimum age recommendation. No item with a heating element may be recommended for children under eight. Some hobby items, such as woodburning kits, may reach very high temperatures and may not be recommended for children under 12.

All warning statements that appear on the toy or package must appear in the instructions as well.

Certain areas of the product itself also must be labeled.

—Accessible surfaces that exceed specified maximum temperatures must carry a warning.

—Toys with replaceable electric lights must include a warning of the maximum safe wattage for a replacement bulb and a notice reminding the user to pull out the plug before changing the bulb.

Parents also must use common sense in selecting and supervising the use of electrical toys. If a toy is labeled "Not recommended for children under eight," this does not automatically mean that every child over eight is mature enough to use the item safely.

World grain reserves rise

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's reserve stockpile of wheat and other grain may rise nearly 42 per cent in 1977, largely because of bumper harvests this year in the United States and the Soviet Union, according to the Agriculture Department.

By the time new harvests are ready next July 1, an estimated 156.2 million metric tons of wheat, corn and other grain will be left over as a buffer against food shortages, the most since 1972, the department said Wednesday.

This year, after poor crops in Russia and elsewhere, the world reserve was 110.1 million tons, about what it was in 1975, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

Officials said global grain production this season was estimated at a record of 1,086.6 million tons, up from 981.6 million last year. That was an increase of 22.3 million tons from a similar estimate Oct. 27.

World grain consumption for 1976-77 was estimated at 1,040.5 million tons, also a record, compared with 981.4 million last year. Thus, with production outstripping consumption, the reserve left over next summer will rise sharply.

Officials said the prospective increase in grain supplies will be due mostly to larger crops in the Soviet Union, the United States, Australia, Argentina and other exporting countries.

Also, grain production was larger in Europe than had initially been expected because of drought, the report said. The figures included wheat and coarse grain, such as corn, barley, oats, sorghum and rye. In the United States, wheat is used primarily for human food, while corn, the largest crop, is used as livestock feed.

But corn and the other grains also are used extensively in many countries as human food and therefore weigh heavily in making world food estimates.

The Soviet Union's grain harvest was estimated at 220 million tons, which includes 210 million of wheat and coarse grains plus 10 million tons of rice, beans and miscellaneous crops not included in the world grain total. In 1975, the Russian harvest of all grain was 140 million tons, the smallest in a decade.

By comparison, the U.S. grain crop this year totalled 247.8 million tons of wheat and coarse grain, up from 242.2 million in 1975, the report said.

But the report also said there is "a tendency toward levelling off of world wheat and coarse grain prices that had been declining rather sharply since midsummer" of this year.

Something extra—community services

Far-flung Chaffey advisory group offers service

A far-flung group of citizens enables Chaffey College to provide something extra for thousands of persons in its vast district.

The group is the extremely active Advisory Council for Community Services here which comprises 30 members from all points of the Chaffey compass.

That "something extra" is other than the standard college offerings. It's community services in terms of special classes, special events, special things to do.

What the council helps the college to deliver is a program attuned and apportioned to the tastes and age levels of a diverse population.

With membership appointments subject to board-of-trustees approval, the council is representative of the communities for which it speaks.

MRS. BONNEVILLE

Headed up by Alta Loma homemaker Shirley Bonneville, the council has evolved into a recommending agency with muscle and voice. This voluntary group keeps the college constantly alert to the educational, cultural and recreational needs and interests of the Chaffey communities.

In its partnership with the college, the council works closely with student services vice president June Teitsworth. Among her other responsibilities, Miss Teitsworth is charged with the development of a community services program proportioned to the concerns of the total Chaffey domain.

No community is shortchanged in the budgeting of community services offerings at its local level. The college uses a demographic formula to assure a fair-handed application of fiscal resources accruing from the permissive community services tax.

JUNE TEITSWORTH

The bulk of the community services budget is deployed for the outreach part of the program in 12 community areas, with resident advocates sitting on the council.

Specifically, 80 per cent of the dollars are prorated in per capita terms for Alta Loma, Chino, Corona, Cucamonga, Etiwanda, Fontana, Guasti, Montclair, Mt. Baldy, Norco, Ontario and Upland. The 20 per cent remainder is earmarked for the on-campus and civic center part of the program and/or offerings shared by two or more communities.

The community services report for the past academic year in this district notes that:

—3,010 persons registered for 142 short-term, noncredit courses, mostly at off-campus locations.

—83 permits were issued to organizations for the use of Chaffey College facilities under the Civil Center Act, accommodating 25,346 persons.

—14,983 and 12,400 in accumulative attendance were scored respectively by the Daniel B. Milliken Planetarium and the Rex W. Wignall Museum-Gallery.

—5,262 youths and grownups participated in five sports projects in the summer months (swimming, football, baseball, wrestling, track).

—1,975 persons of all ages shared the fiesta of Semana de la Raza and 375 homecomers celebrated Chaffey's Founders' day.

District funding for that year's program was $198,623 based on a community services tax rate of 2.24 cents per $100 assessed valuation. Community services funding for the current year is $366,437; the tax rate, 3.73 cents. The increase was justified by district growth, the annexation of the Corona-Norco area.

Both Miss Teitsworth and Mrs. Bonneville are convinced that the program has a distance to go to catch up with the growth of the district.

"There are still many community services needs to be met, many concerns that must be sidetracked until we have the funds to deal with them," Miss Teitsworth said.

With growth as the main factor, a case could be made for a 1.27 cents increase in the community services tax rate to the 5 cents maximum allowed by the state.

Miss Teitsworth explained that such an adjustment would bring in an additional $124,763, raising the revenue for community services purposes from $366,437 to $491,200.

The "invisible plus" in the community services budget is the advisory council under Mrs. Bonneville who is completing her second year as leader of this organization. Her successor next month will be Bette Root, Upland, secretary at Cal Poly Pomona.

The effort of this group of volunteers is keyed to subcommittees. These and the persons needing them are:

—Budget and Finance, Chuck Bush, superintendent of recreation, City of Ontario.

—Community Services Classes, Doug Charchenko, superintendent of recreation, City of Corona.

—Communtiy Events, Mrs. Suzanne Millard, Ontario homemaker and student.

—Rex W. Wignall Museum-Gallery, Sam Maloof, Alta Loma, past president of the National Crafts Council, world famous for his designs in wood, avid collector of Indian artifacts.

—Daniel B. Milliken Planetarium, Estrelda Thomas, Cucamonga homemaker.

—Opportunities for Women, Mrs. Root, until

As vice president

Keefer to join N.Y. organization

Grant B. Keefer is joining the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc. New York City, N.Y. as vice president in charge of retail operations, Western Division, effective Jan. 10, and will make his headquarters in the Las Angeles office, according to Jack Kauffman, bureau president.

This is a new position at the bureau which is in the process of expanding its retail sales and marketing operations. Keefer will work cooperatively with the bureau's member newspapers in the West Coast region on a market-by-market basis to service selected retail accounts.

This new program is part of a bureau sales effort being directed to all decision-making levels in the corporate and regional headquarters of major retail companies.

Keefer has been vice president of advertising and sales promotion for Ralphs Grocery Co., West Coast supermarket chain, and a division of Federated Department Stores, since May of 1972.

Before that he was a vice president and account supervisor for an advertising agency.

A 1960 graduate of Michigan State University with an A.B. degree, Keefer also holds a certificate from the executive program of UCLA. He is married and resides with his wife, Jane, and their four children in Glendale.

Human pair as sexual objects for the birds

GREENACRES, Wash. (AP) — As sex objects, Robert Young and Lester Boyd are for the birds.

They bob, they weave, they coo senuous mating calls and perform food exchange rituals — all to put uptight falcons in the mood for romance.

When the two men are successful, male falcons deposit semen in a special hat with a rubber ring, and female faclons submit to artificial insemination.

"The birds can be very finicky when it comes time to mate," said Young, a physician in this Spokane suberb. "Ther's a number of courtship rituals you go through, such as food exchange. Eventually, the bird looks upon the human as a sexual object."

Young and Boyd, a Washington State University zoology technician at Pullman, both are experienced facloners, hunters who use birds of prey in catching animals.

They began using their complex breeding method — called "cooperative artificial insemination" — three years ago as a way to to increase their supply of birds.

The technique has produced about 20 falcons and hawks, many of them rare hybrids, the men said. Their favorite variety is the prairie falcon, which has a 2½-foot wingspan and is protected under federal migratory bird laws.

In Pullman, Boyd begins the process with his stock of mostly male birds. Following the example of wild birds, he offers food to his falcon "mate" while bowing, posturing and warbling seductively. If the courtship ritual succeeds, the male bird hops onto the special hat and deposits semen.

The sperm stays usable for only 12 to 14 hours, so Boyd rushes it to Greenacres by carrier pigeon. He said he uses pigeons because they are reliable and cheap and spare him the 160-mile roundtrip drive.

At Greenacres, Young takes over with his stock of largely female birds. He goes through much the same ritual, and when the female is ready, he implants the semen through a plastic tube.

"Our interest is that it's not so forceful (as other methods), not a traumatic experience for the bird," said Boyd. "We can get more mileage out of the birds."

Young's champion hen is a prairie falcon which has produced 17 eggs this year, 10 of them fertile.

The men said birds of prey have been produced by artificial insemination since the 1940s, but few breeders use their technique. About 200 birds of prey are artificially bred each year in North America, they said.

Predictions:

Earthquake conjecture may wreak social havoc

TIM REITERMAN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Earthquake predictions are a mixed blessing that will save lives but also will trigger waves of social and economic havoc, according to an 18-month study.

"The first credible earthquake prediction with an extended lead time will exact a very high price in economic dislocation and social disruption, unless responsible public officials and business executives take decisive steps in the future," University of Colorado sociologist J. Eugene Haas said Wednesday. "If we fail to resolve soon some of the more difficult problems, the earthquake prediction technology will come back to haunt us."

Haas and Colorado State University sociologist Dennis S. Mileti directed interviews with about 1,000 Californians to determine how various levels of government, news media, business and families would react to a quake prediction made months or years in advance. The study was financed by a $500,000 National Science Foundation grant.

"If a quake occurred as predicted, you would find a drastic reduction in death and injury, a moderate reduction in property damage and a decline in the local economy unless policies were changed in advance," Haas told a news conference here.

He said an authoritative prediction would spread economic uncertainty in a target community. Other effects would include a decline in property values and tax revenues, reduced availability of insurance and mortgages, changes in investment patterns, temporary or permanent population movement, a slowdown or cessation of work activity and a decline in jobs and business activity.

Although researchers don't plan to release recommendations for several months, Haas said some socio-economic effects could be offset by setting up a private or government funded quake insurance company to guarantee quake insurance availability.

However, the report noted that some quake prediction-related problems indirectly reduce casualties by making the area undesirable for employment and residency.

Predictions also minimize casualties because they allow some adjustment of physical facilities, such as dams and buildings, the report said.

Although the successful prediction of a damaging quake may be years away, Haas said now is the time for the country to start wrestling with major quake prediction issues. Should disclosure of quake damage risk be required in all real estate transactions? Should evacuation from higher risk areas be encouraged or ordered? Should local news media play down news that is likely to have a negative impact on their community?

"Resolution of some of the complex issues will take several years, perhaps longer," Hass said. "Easy solutions are unlikely."

Trio of Krishna 'Santas' arrested

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — "Where's your reindeer?" people on the sidewalk jeered when three Hare Krishna Santa Clauses were led away by police after refusing to give the Salvation Army $25 they had collected.

A Charleston Municipal Court hearing was planned for the three sect members accused of panhandling, a misdemeanor.

Charles Link, Jeffrey Long and Robert Hamilton, all of Cleveland, Ohio, said they had been going from city to city seeking contributions for the International Society for Krishna Consciouness.

The Hare Krishna sect members usually appear on streets wearing Hindu-style garb and with heads shaved except for a topknot. But the three arrested Wednesday wore Santa suits, complete with white wig and beard.

'We're ministers," Link said as a city policeman frisked him.

"You do not have a permit and you're not going to collect money on the streets of Charleston," policeman Thomas McVey said.

McVey told the three, "Take the money around the corner and donate it to the Salvation Army, or we're going to put you into jail."

They refused and McVey said, "Well, then, you're going to jail."

"We're willing to leave," Link replied. "You're just trying to steal our money. There are no laws stating that you can take from one charity organization and give to another."

Link said he and his fellows Santas had collected $25, "and that took us all day long to get."

Fresno TV may orbit soon

FRESNO (AP) — Fresno may soon have the nation's first satellite-to-home broadcasting system and probably the nation's first over-the-air pay television system, a corporation official says.

An agreement announced Wednesday between KAIL-TV, Channel 53 here, and Optical Systems Corp. of Burlingame would feature first-run films via satellite on home television in late 1977 if approved by the Federal Communications Commission. KAIL is owned by Transamerica Broadcasting Inc.

Programing would be relayed through a Westar satellite and rebroadcast directly to the 250,000 homes in the station's potential viewing area, said Alan Greenstadt, president of Optical Systems Corp.

He said the firm chose Fresno because the city has only UHF stations.

"This means that virtually every home in the market is completely equipped to receive our signals," Greenstadt said, adding that Fresno "is a nice market, upwardly mobile and not too large to go in and do it right."

Greenstadt said rates will be about $10 to $12 a month. For that subscription fee, viewers will get eight to 10 first-run movies each month.

The movies will be uncut and uninterrupted by commercials. X-rated films will not be aired but programming will include R-rated pictures.

Greenstadt said the movies would be aired so they do not coincide with major programming on the free broadcasting stations, and movies will be repeated at different times throughout the month.

The FCC should rule on the agreement in September or October next year, and the system would be ready to broadcast within three months after approval.

Bah! Humbug!

Actor dons Dickens role, entertains festive crowds

By TIM REITERMAN
Associated Press Writer

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — It's the time of year when Russ Bernardt puts on his black stovepipe hat, ill-fitting fur coat and miserly sneer. Then he storms through festive crowds, coaking, "Christmas, humbug! Get away! I want none of your caroling!"

And once attention is drawn, this unmistakably nasty apparition tells the tale that has haunted him for 34 Christmases past and has long outlived its author, Charles Dickens.

The 51-year-old actor figures he has reached about 3 million people in grumping and grimacing through 1,500 performances of his adaptation of "A Christmas Carol."

"With 35 years as Scrooge, I'm the longest running one-man show in the world, but I'm only good between Thanksgiving and Christmas," Bernhardt says in his British accent.

Bernhardt now lives in Los Gatos, a community on the peninsula south of San Francisco. But he is a native of Bath, England, and literally grew into his role as Scrooge.

"When I was about seven, my mother adapted the Christmas Carol to the viewpoint of a child," he explained. "I played Tiny Tim for nearly 10 years. I was 16 and over six feet tall before I decided to switch to Ebenezer Scrooge."

On Dec. 7, 1941, Bernhardt first performed as Scrooge, at a Baptist church in New Jersey. Only about 30 persons were in the audience, because Pearl Harbor had been bombed by the Japanese that morning. Under the guise of humbugging, this Scrooge says he has since raised thousands of dollars for churches, schools and community organizations. He has appeared in uncounted parades and disrupted, by invitation, dozens of public Christmas tree lightings. He performed Saturday night at the Christmas banquet of the Smithsonian Associates in Washington, D.C.

"I never get tired of playing the old bugger," said Bernhardt.

His adaptation is a first-person monologue in which Scrooge tells about a terrifying Christmas Eve revelation of his past, present and future. His Scrooge is not crotchety but is robust and virile enough to mend his stingy and mean ways.

"Dickens' character and the tale are the essence of Christmas," he adds. "Once a person looks into himself and sees his faults and takes steps to correct them, he has the spirit of Christmas.

Day off slated for mothers

Mothers in the community of Diamond Bar will have a break during the final days of last minute Christmas shopping with a Mom's Day Off to be sponsored Monday by Diamond Bar Junior Women's Club.

Mothers who have made reservations will have an opportunity to leave their children, 3 to 7 years of age, at the Evergreen Elementary School in South Diamond Bar.

Contributor suggestion recognized

Another Progress Bulletin reader has been recognized for her contribution to the Polly's Pointers column which appears in the Sunday edition of the paper.

Miss Teresa Diaz, 190 E. Columbia Ave., Pomona, will have her suggestion printed in the Jan. 2 edition.

In blazers

One jacket that works with everything is a neutral colored velveteen or gabardine blazer.

Golden year observed

Mr. and Mrs. Ammon N. Showalter of Pomona observed their golden wedding anniversary at a family dinner held Thanksgiving Day in the San Bernardino mountains home of Mrs. Showalter's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ronnekamp. Mrs. Ronnekamp of San Bernardino and the Showalters' daughter, Mrs. Dewey Caldwell of Honolulu, were hostesses.

The Showalters were married Nov. 26, 1926, in Iowa City, Iowa. They lived in Roseland, Neb. before coming to California. They lived in Lancaster from 1937 to 1939 when they came to Pomona. Mr. Showalter was a mechanic for Southern Service Co. prior to his retirement in 1967.

The anniversary also marked the first reunion of the seven brothers and sisters of the Grabill family in 20 years. Relatives from Roseland, Hastings and Norfolk, Neb. joined Californians in celebrating the event.

January wedding planned

Miss Charlotte Ann Biggs and Jeffrey Lawrence Kirkendall of San Diego will be married in January in Pilgrim Congregational Church, Pomona.

The future bride, daughter of Mrs. Naomi Holt of Eufala, Okla., graduated from Stigler High School and Claremore Junior College, Claremore, Okla. She is employed by Ruben's Harbor Island in San Diego.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Kirkendall of Claremont, the groom-to-be is a 1972 graduate of Claremont High School and a 1976 graduate of San Diego State University. He was president of ATO fraternity and president of the Interfraternity Council of San Diego State. Mr. Kirkendall is an associate of Pemberton Real Estate Brokerage in La Jolla.

Slipper magic

The right shoes for an antique dress are little small-heeled evening slippers in silk or satin.

Dancers schedule meeting

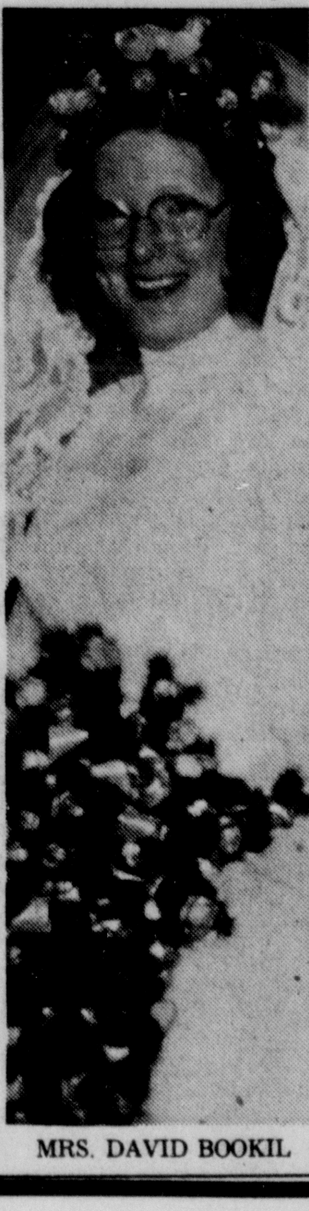
Steeltown Twirlers will hold their last workshop Tuesday at the Kaiser Steel Gym, Fontana.

The group will start a beginners class Jan. 11 from 7:30 to 10 p.m., with Don Farnsworth instructing. Classes will be open for three weeks and will be held at the Kaiser Steel Gym. More information may be obtained by calling 627-3723.

Food fallacy

There's no single food that is either fattening or slimming. "It's the sum total of daily calories" that make the difference in body weight, says Dr. Norris Bollenbeck of The Sugar Association. "Today our leading research and nutrition scientists advise moderation and balance in daily food selection. The safest way to achieve and maintain good health is to select foods from the basic four groups — proteins, fats, carbohydrates, fruits and vegetables — and then eat a moderate quantity to keep weight at a desirable level."

Couple says vows



MRS. DAVID BOOKIL

Miss Cynthia Ellen Hawkins of Fontana and David D. Bookil, Jr. of Diamond Bar were married in the First Lutheran Church in Fontana. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Walter Hawkins of Fontana and the son of Mr. and Mrs. David D. Bookil, Sr. were married in a double-ring ceremony by Pastor Clarence Kinchey.

Honor attendant was Mrs. Kathy Caroline Hawkins, Mrs. Linda Lehr, Miss Donna Bookil and Miss Susan Moseley.

Standing as best man was Dennis E. Bookil of Fullerton.

Ushers were Jack D. Hawkins, Orville R. Ivins, Eric Keller and Robert Vasquez. Flower girl was Cynthia Anne Ivins of Ontario.

Following the rite, a reception was held at the Fontana Women's Club. When the couple returned from a wedding trip to Carmel, they established a home in Upland.

WHATEVER SHAPE YOUR BUDGET IS IN, THERE'S A SINGER GIFT TO FIT IT.

A Singer* sewing machine is an extraordinary gift. But that doesn't mean it's an impossible one.

Because regardless of how much you want to spend, Singer has lots of special gifts you can afford.

For example, The Fashion Mate* zig-zag machine. It doesn't cost a lot, but sure does a lot.

It has a front drop-in bobbin that's easy to see and easy to replace. And a stitch-length dial that makes stitch-length setting easy.

Or, if you want to give something a little more extravagant, there's the Stylist* machine. It has a free arm for sewing hard-to-reach places. A built-in buttonholer. And our simple-to-use front drop-in bobbin.

For someone who already owns a Singer machine, we have cabinets to show them off in. And beautifully lined wicker sewing baskets with sections for every sewing notion.

And to prove that when it comes to gift giving, Singer is the place to clean up, we have a full selection of our quality vacuum cleaners.

As you can see, you'll find all kinds of gifts at Singer at all kinds of prices. From sewing machines. To sewing books. To sewing baskets. Of course, the best thing about them all is the one thing they all have in common: the Singer name. And that's quite a gift all by itself.

Joyce Brothers

Worries about aged

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I watched my grandmother being maltreated by everyone in my family. I loved her so much and though it made me furious there was nothing I could do to protect here from the physical and psychological insults. Now, at 24, I have an intense fear of being cast aside in old age as she was. It depresses me so that I feel I'd take my own life rather than allow this to happen. Will I ever overcome my fear? — W.N.

DEAR W.N.: I think it might help if you talked, and perhaps worked with vital, active older men and women who are concentrating much of their energy and time on trying to change some of the prejudice against the elderly.

There is an organization of active elderly people, The Grey Panthers, who are doing constructive work in Washington D.C., and in several other cities. Many young people, in their teens and twenties, are lending their support. You might consider looking for or even organizing such a group in your area.

People are not like automobiles or appliances. They break down, become unless, lifeless and obsolete, after a certain period.

If, at 24, you have varied interests, are vital, enjoy life and look forward to each new day, you probably will be much the same in your later years. Don't be worrisome, fearful or preoccupied with your health or you will probably feel the same when you're older.

Expand your interests and activities beyond your family, now, if you wish to live a fulfilling life in the future.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My husband and I had very satisfactory sex relations until the children came along. He is kind and good to me, but our relationship seems to have become a friendship. He treats me with great respect and I honestly don't think he'd ever leave me though I know he has another woman. He doesn't sexually love me anymore. — E.P.

DEAR E.P.: It is important for you to accept and recognize your own sexual feelings and needs.

If you want a marriage relationship that will be rewarding and fulfilling to you and your husband, it is important that he get professional help. This will enable him to gain insight into the real problems so that he can make progress toward solving them.

Once your husband begins to be aware of his problems, it might be helpful if you planned some time together away from the children. If the children could spend a day or so with relatives it would certainly not harm them.

Something must be done soon to help both of you. Try to communicate honestly with your husband. Tell him that while you love being a mother, you also expect something more from him. Reassure him that if he seeks help, you will cooperate and stand by him to see it through. If you are both anxious to save your marriage and your family, a solution can be reached and you will both be much happier.

Combination

Sometimes a specific nutrient is referred to as being balanced, such as "balanced protein." This means that the protein, which is made up of substances called amino acids, contains a "balance" or combination of all the essential amino acids in amounts that most nearly match the combination and amounts needed by our bodies.

Volunteers decorating lobby tree

The beautifully decorated fourteen-foot Christmas tree in the lobby of Pomona Valley Community Hospital is proof of what comes from a concerned and thoughtful idea coupled with the support it received to make it an artistic reality.

Some months ago, Mrs. Wilma Temple, director of volunteers at the hospital, asked that the many talented employes and auxiliary volunteers combine their creative talents in producing ornaments for the tree that is always placed during the holidays in the hospital lobby.

The immediate response was rather slow but as the holidays neared the ornaments began coming in, so that now over 1,000 ornaments adorn the lobby tree.

From wooden figures, birds in egg-filled nests, crocheted snow flakes, jeweled balls, pixies, needlepoint, pine cones to quilling and a painter's brush will be found on the tree.

Residents of the area are invited to come through the front door of the hospital lobby at 1798 N. Garey Ave., Pomona, between 9 a.m. and 8 p.m. to view the tree.

'Maybe he's a little mad'

Mark 'madness' sets youth on wild spree

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — Stephen Holcomb, who last September talked a bank into exchanging a 1923 German 100,000-mark note for nearly $40,000, still has folks in northern Michigan shaking their heads.

His mother calls him "mad."

Don Dooles, who runs the Twin Bay International Harvester dealership, says the 31-yearold Holcomb showed up at his dealership with the mark note one day last September and asked if he could use it to purchase a fancy new I-H Scout with an AM-FM radio.

"I told him I couldn't take that thing," Dooley said. But Dooley did call the National Bank & Trust Co. for Holcomb to ask what 100,000 German marks were worth.

Apparently he forgot to mention what year the marks were issued.

A while later, Holcomb was back at the dealership with a handful of cash. The bank had exchanged the old mark for $39,700.

Thus began a joy-ride and spending spree that would do justice to any dyed-in-the-wool free spirit. But Holcomb knew it couldn't last.

"I have a lot of good memories," he said.

Holcomb drove his new $7,000 Scout to Chicago and stayed at a posh hotel where he once tipped the elevator operator $900.

"I thought he was doing a real good job running that elevator, that's all," Holcomb said.

He also purchased a stereo tape deck, a double-barreled shotgun, a pistol and a new fishing pole. When he got back to Traverse City his windfall was down to $20,000 and the spree was about to end.

Sheriff's detective Jim Palmer paid a visit to Holcomb at his Traverse City motel room and left with all of Holcomb's new toys.

"They came busting in my room," Holcomb said, "and they took my truck and about $5,200 cash. The two cops hauled me down to the bank and told me to sign something, so I guess that's where I lost the money I had in the bank."

No criminal charges have been charged against Holcomb, yet, but the bank, which refuses to discuss the case, has sued to recover the $18,177 it has not recovered. A hearing on the case was scheduled for November but was delayed. No new date has been set.

Actually, the note in 1923 was worth "less than a U.S. penny even when it was printed," according to an international banking expert in Detroit.

"He's a good kid and an honorable person," his mother, Helen, said as she slumped in a chair at the beauty parlor where she works. Then she began to cry.

"Maybe he's a little mad," she said. "Maybe he's completely mad. But that still doesn't make what they did to him right." The bank marks have been in Holcomb's house as long as he can remember, he said. His mother used to be an antique dealer.

Detective Palmer admits the bank may be on shaky ground for confiscating Holcomb's truck.

"I think they're operating on the principle that possession is nine-tenths of the law," the detective said. "If they gave it back ... he'd probably try to beat it up."

When asked why he did it, Holcomb pointed to an astrological chart on the wall of the trailer where he lives and said, "There's a comet coming from somewhere out there, and in its wake it's going to leave a lot of fire and brimstone."

Detroit's massive new beginning center with 'tall' order to fill

By DON OAKLEY

DETROIT (NEA) — This is a city of vivid contrasts.

As sharply delineated as the soaring towers of a spectacular skyscraper complex — Renaissance Center — nearing completion on the riverfront. Or the flat squares of abandoned lots one can see from its vantage point.

As extreme as hope and despair, growth and decay, security and fear.

One goes south from Detroit to reach Canada. One goes in any other direction to escape despair, decay and fear, as 20 per cent of Detroit's population, both black and white, have done since 1950 — but not as many blacks as whites, since the nation's fifth largest city, hard-pressed for that ranking by vigorous Houston, is now more than half black.

One goes up, however, literally up to the skies, to find rebirth, or the promise of it.

If it is possible to be unconcerned about the fate of Detroit, whose problems after all are only those of a hundred other cities, if on a magnified scale, it is impossible to be unexcited by the Renaissance Center.

At the core, a 70-story circular glass hotel — the Detroit Plaza — scheduled to be opened in March, 1977. Surrounding it, four lesser office towers, already partially occupied. At the base, a 14-acre "podium" with parking garages, restaurants, entertainment facilities and space for 100 retail stores in an enclosed three-level shopping mall.

A third again as large as New York's Rockefeller Center, three times as large as Atlanta's Peachtree Center. At $337 million the largest privately financed project in history, the brainchild of Henry Ford II and 51 corporate members of the Renaissance Center Partnership.

Despite the massiveness of it all, and even amid the jumble and dirt of construction, the surprising impression is one or airiness and light. The best place to view the RenCen (as Detroiters, perhaps to reduce it to more humanly comprehensible terms, call it) is actually from inside it, from the atrium at the hotel's base. This is an eight-story skylighted expanse, criss-crossed by aerial walkways high above a giant reflecting pool, hanging gardens and cocktail pods.

From anywhere within it, a different vista of the outer glass towers, of reflection upon reflection, dazzles and redazzles the visitor. This is the brainchild of John Portman Associates of Atlanta, designers of famed Peachtree.

They call it the "Jesus Christ school of Architecture," for that is the name everyone invokes, and in no irreverent sense, upon first entering the atrium.

This is what architecture ought to be, one thinks. And inevitable: If the mind and hand of man are capable of this, surely a city can be saved.

No one, of course, including its planners, thinks that the Renaissance Center alone will revitalize Detroit. Some people, in fact, are afraid it may do just the opposite, that instead of radiating a spirit of renewal outward it will become a thing unto itself, drawing off business energy from the rest of downtown and thus accelerating the decay it is designed to reverse.

Nor do buildings, however grandiose, a city make. A city is people, and if people cannot live decently in the city, if they cannot find work there, if they are afraid to walk its streets, the decay goes far deeper than brick or stone.

Last August, black gangs invaded a rock concert at Cobo Hall, within the very shadow of Renaissance Center, robbing, raping, terrorizing the white audience. For those who were there, or who merely read about it, it will be a long time before they venture downtown again for any reason.

Where were the police? Nearly 1,000 out of a force of 5,000 were laid off in July to help the city balance its budget. Where is the money that could have kept them? Gone north and east and west with Detroit's fleeing middle-class taxpayers, gone with the jobs Detroit lost or did not gain because of the recession.

Even more ominous for Detroit in the past summer of discontent was announced closing of 15 schools and the severe trimming of the budgets of others because citizens again defeated a tax increase, continuing the pattern of a decade. Despite special appeals to blacks and ethnic groups, few people even bothered to vote.

Yet a new beginning has to be made somewhere, and what a beginning is Renaissance Center. If it does more than pump new money into Detroit — if it can also inspire new pride in Detroiters, whose city still has much that is beautiful and much to offer in the way of culture — it will truly have earned its name.

If not, it will only stand as a magnificent monument to what could have been.

Of 'Presidency'

Carter assails 'imperial' image

WASHINGTON (AP) — He'll be Jimmy, not James Earl. Now that he's won the election he prefers a Ford, not a Lincoln. And his dinner companions might be the plain as well as the prestigious.

President-elect Jimmy Carter says he is serious about toning down the imperial image of the presidency.

But a White House veteran says it just won't work — the Oval Office was, is and will continue to be a throne room.

"No matter how much he reduces the trappings, he is going to be treated like a king," says George Reedy, press secretary to former President Lyndon B. Johnson and author of "The Twilight of the Presidency."

Reedy says in his book that presidents become victims of imperial isolation, removed from the people, remote from reality and surrounded by sycophants.

Jimmy Carter is worried about exactly that, says aide Greg Schneiders. It's certainly nonimperial to sign bills with Jimmy instead of James Earl. And apparently it won't cause legal problems, Schneiders says.

Then there's the matter of excessive deference.

"He's talked to me about wanting to be careful to avoid that deference," says Schneiders. "The way he's dealt with it up to now is to encourage disagreement from staff members."

But Reedy doesn't think that will work, either. "Nobody is going to go in and criticize the president," Reedy says. "Harakiri has never been popular at the White House." Worse than that, says Reedy, presidents eventually tend to encourage deference.

"Almost every president started out saying he wanted disagreement. But what's going to happen, I think, is that a lot of people who've been associated with him are going to fade into the background in a year or two. They're used to speaking their minds, and that's not going to be popular."

Schneiders says Carter is thinking about eliminating limousines for his staff and has talked to the Secret Service about replacing the presidential Lincoln with a Ford LTD. "He's holding out for the LTD," Schneiders says.

A Secret Service spokesman said the service has LTD's that could be used by the president.

Schneiders says Carter is considering inviting plain folks to the White House once in awhile for white-tie banquets, and occasionally for blue-tie dinners with the Carter family. He says Carter also might spend nights with average families when he travels.

Aides are trying to work out a way Carter can devote a few hours a week to the problems of ordinary people — referred to him by congressmen or government agencies.

"That way he could get a feel of how people have to deal with government agencies," Schneiders said.

Carter's efforts to appear plebian, however, haven't met with entirely rave reviews. The Washington Star headlined columnist Betty Beale's complaints about the President-elect's habit of carrying his own suit bag: "The People Want a President, Not a Bellhop."

Of nostalgic memories

Diary of national life recounts 200 years

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's like reading a diary of my lift," a middle-aged man said. "Almost everything here reminds me of some event."

"I know," his wife said. "Some of the memories are good, some not so good." She nodded toward the famous "I Want You" poster of Uncle Sam pointing his finger. "That one, for instance."

But it was more than the diary of one life, it was a diary of the national life.

As a Bicentennial event, the Society of Illustrators took the trouble to collect all the pictures they could find, covering 200 years, that are familiar to most Americans.

They hung them in the New York Historical Society building, and a Saturday stroll through those corridors was like eavesdropping on the American family rummaging through its photo album.

"Look at that!" a fiftyish woman said. "That was the illustration in the 'Alice in Wonderland' I had as a girl. I wonder what happened to that old book?"

One also wonders how many costume parties that illustration — The Mad hatter's Tea Party — influenced over the years. And who was John Tenniel? He was the long forgotten artist who drew it.

The shame is that most of the illustrators who left so many indelible impressions on American minds are anonymous to most of us.

The Frederick Remingtons and Norman Rockwells and Thomas Nasts are represented, and everybody knows who they are, but shouldn't the name Ernest Thompson Seton be as familiar?

He illustrated the Boy Scout Handbook, 1911 edition, by which every Scout over 40 learned, on pages 140 and 141, to tell the difference between a mink, skunk, badger, raccoon, opossum and squirrel.

"Here's to Ernest Thompson Seton," one such old scout remarked.

And here's to Leo Rackow, a man with an unambiguous message. He drew the World War II poster proclaiming the Air Corps as "America's Arm of Defense." Sure enough, it shows an arm, with the attached hand holding airplanes.

"There was one of those on the Post Office in Huntington, W. Va.," one graying man remembered. "It stayed up long after the war was over."

Another war poster drew its share of scorn from a later generation of feminists passing by. It was the World War I poster, drawn by Howard C. Christy, showing a middiebloused sweet young thing in a sailor hat saying, "Gee I wish I were a man, I'd join the Navy."

To a nation grown accustomed to the television commercial, an exhibit of advertisements during the country's age of innocence excited more curiosity than shock of recognition.

Cancer hot-line extended to valley

The Cancer Information Service hot-line has been extended to valley residents.

Fast authoritative and up-to-date information about cancer symptoms, types of prevention, detection and treatment, and the community resources for cancer care in Southern California is available by dialing toll-free, 1-800-252-9066.

The region-wide service is sponsored by the County-USC Comprehensive Cancer Center. During the first three weeks of operation, information assistants responded to more than 1,000 inquiries.

Many of those calls have come from community physicians wanting to consult with cancer center specialists regarding treatment for their patients. These telephone consultations are free of charge to calling physicians. "We are pleased with the overwhelming public response so far," said David Docter, director of the cancer center's office of cancer communications. "The many calls we have received indicates the need for this kind of service." Docter said that a majority of the calls concern cancer symptoms or treatment of breast, lung, and colon cancers.

"Many callers have been concerned with a lump or symptom they think might be cancer and many others want to know if they are at high risk of getting cancer, the side effects of chemotherapy (drugs) or radiation therapy, or some of the alternative treatments available. We cannot make recommendations, however, as only a persons physician can do that. Other callers are seeking a second medical opinion, while others want facts about laetrile and other unproven methods of cancer treatment," he said.

Docter reported many callers require counseling and support. "Persons call," he said, "because they don't know how to cope with the many problems brought on by the disease striking a family member, relative or friend. They call with real problems and fears that you can feel on the telephone. The information assistants can provide support and understanding and perhaps direct callers to additional resources in their own community.

"Often people are so upset while seeing their doctor that they don't ask the questions which are bothering them, or they get home and find they don't understand what their physicians have told them. We can help them with medical terminology or even help them compose the questions to ask of their own physicians," he said.

The Cancer Information Service operates from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

'Energy' guzzlers

NEW YORK (AP) — Spotting the energy guzzlers among home appliances and shifting their use to "off-peak hours" will help reduce the size of future increases in electric bills.

Shifting to off-peak means using appliances in the evening when power consumption is lower and electricity is produced at a utility's most efficient stations — usually fired by coal or nuclear energy, according to the General Public Utilities Corp.

Soviet artists scorn riches

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — In the United States, musicians who sell 10 million records and draw capacity crowds to concerts become millionaires. In the USSR, they get a government salary.

Members of the Russian folk-rock group Pesnyary made clear in an interview that it's a long way from their home base of Minsk to Morgantown, N.C., where they won a standing ovation on their first American tour.

The eight musicians say they're proud of their claim to be Russia's most popular group, and they said they enjoy being recognized on Soviet streets. But they insist they cannot be called "stars."

Pesnyary performed here Saturday night as part of a nine-day visit to mostly small Southeastern towns. The group is sharing the bill with the New Christy Minstrels, whose promoters are hoping for an invitation to the Soviet Union in return.

The Russians said their salary is not small, and that with royalties from record sales they earn about as much as a Soviet doctor or lawyer. But they could never pull down $1 million or more from a single concert, they said, as some Western rock groups do.

"We don't need money like that. We don't need status like that," said Pesnyary manager Leonid Borovsky.

The leader of the group Vladimir Mulyavin, said that unlike American rock music, Pesnyary's brand never is antiestablishment. But he insisted that there is no government censorship. "Our music doesn't need any kind of quality control," he said.

Pesnyary includes contemporary electric music in its repertory, but it specializes in Byelorussian folk. Group members said, for example, that the saga "The Wounding of Ivan" is among their "masterpieces."

At their concerts in the Soviet Union, they said, nobody in the audience uses drugs. And while reaction can be warm, it is never overwhelming or frenzied.

The group's tour is sanctioned by the Soviet government, and a woman from the Ministry of Cultural Affairs accompanies group members to interviews.

"This tour places great responsibility on us," Borovsky said through an interpreter. "We are the first Soviet group appearing here and, according to our appearances, Americans will make judgments on the rest of the groups."

WINTER SOLDIER — George Washington's likeness stands outside Ford Mansion in Morristown, N.J. which he used as his winter headquarters during the campaign of 1779.

Character in crisis

Paine's essay bolsters struggling nation

EDITOR'S NOTE — The new American nation was born in July, 1976. Five months later it almost died. One of the things that helped save it was a little essay by Thomas Paine that appeared 200 years ago today in a Philadelphia newspaper.

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

As a tattered army straggled through Newark, one of Amampfa's first war correspondents sat down before a flickering campfire, took out a wooden pen and paper, rubbed his hands briskly against the cold, and using a drum for a desk, began to write.

"These are the times that try men's souls," he confessed.

And what a trial it was! America's cause was nearly lost. What had begun with such high hopes in the spring of 1775 was ending in disaster in the winter of 1776.

'The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country," Thomas Paine acknowledged by the fire's dim glow.

Winter was closing bitterly around the bloody and reeling army that had thought to liberate America. Some were dropping from hunger, exhaustion or wounds. But more were just giving up and going home.

"It seems as though the few that remain ... are to fall a sacrifice to the British savages," lamented one of the faithful. "A Hell itself could not furnish worse beings than subsist in the world where our army are now posted."

It had all been too easy at first. A disorganized mob of angry farmers had driven the mighty Redcoats from Concord to Boston. The British had marched foolishly into an ambush on Bunker Hill. Then by a fortunate placement of artillery, George Washington had driven them out to sea.

Congress found the courage to declare the English colonies in America free and independent states to be governed by their own people.

The cocky Americans built forts all over New York to await the return of the Redcoats, confident that the enemy would march into their guns again. But this time it was the Yankees who were duped, outflanked, trapped in their own forts, crushed or sent scattering in panic.

"On the appearance of our troops, the rebels fled like scared rabbits," boasted a British officer.

Almost 3,000 Americans were surrendered with Fort Washington. Fort Lee was abandoned with most of its stores. And George Washington and his chastened citizen soldiers began retreating across New Jersey in the chill rains of November.

By the middle of December Washington had crossed into Pennsylvania, and by destroying or securing all the boats, had stalled the British at the Delaware river.

"But how long we shall be able to do it," he conceded, "God only knows."

The once daring Congress bestowed dictatorial authority on Washington and fled for the safety of Baltimore. In lesser hands such power might have doomed the democratic experiment in America no matter who won the war.

Paine anguished at "the deplorable and melancholy condition the people were in, afraid to speak and almost to think, the public presses stopped, and nothing in circulation but fears and falsehoods."

There was talk of surrender. The frightened Americans turned on each other. Washington's officers grumbled, and some openly called for a new leader who might be a winner.

Washington had indeed faltered, had been indecisive, had taken poor advice while failing to assert his own views. He had been outgeneraled and outfought. But he was learning.

Thomas Paine was a transplanted Englishman who had been in America scarcely two years, but he was, nonetheless, describing with gifted insight the character of the country as well as its general.

A later generation would say that Americans need a kick in the pants, a Pearl Harbor, before they get fighting mad and stir themselves to do what must be done.

In the closing days of our year of national birth, Uncle Sam was being kicked so hard his teeth clattered. But only Paine, Washington, and a few others anticipated the result.

What Paine believed was that America had not yet begun to fight, that crisis would bring out the best in her, that she would care enough for her principles to keep them.

Paine's words rallied a nation. It was not that he persuaded America what she ought to be but he reminded her of what she was.

Reprinted as a pamphlet, the essay soon circulated throughout the country. Washington had them read to his anxious soldiers.

'The presidents and God'

Founding fathers united in faith that God exists

EDITOR'S NOTE: This first installement of a five-part Christmas series about the religion of U.S. presidents, "The Presidents and God," deals with the founding five, from Washington to Monroe.

By G. W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Faith is a private process but its disposition often shows up in public, particularly for U.S. presidents. They display it subtly or directly, in what they say and do, in the measure they take of issues before the people.

It is not, in the American tradition of free choice about religion, a qualifying test for government office.

Yet the element always has been there in the remarkable mixture of the sacred and profane in the country's politics, an underlying concern in the shaping of its founding documents, the unfolding of its history, the attitudes of its electorate.

As British writer G. K. Chesterton put it early in the present century, the United States "is a nation with the soul of a church." A peculiar society, distinctively separating religious and state authority, yet curiously blending their influences in its codes, policies, thought and customs.

Down through the years, presidents to varying degrees have reflected that strange interplay of religious idealism and official function and inevitably have been subjected to citizen judgments about how they applied both.

"Infidel!" The complaint was flung at some of the nation's most devout chief executives of the past because of their nonconformist habits. Others were criticized for their particular pious professions.

It's a touchy zone, and the psychological roots of it go back to the old theory of the "divine right" of kings, in which the king is expected properly to embody the religious aspirations of the people. Although the United States in law rejected that concept, it is deeply embedded in the urge and assumptions of community life, whether led by a tribal chief, an ancient emperor, a modern despot or a democratically elected president.

People instinctively want — and expect — their highest impulses to be summed up in their leader.

As Greek philosopher Aristotle put it, "politics is a branch of morals."

That basic relationship, which also involves religion as the main source and buttress of morality, was stoutly affirmed by the early presidents of this country, those among the founding fathers.

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensible supports," George Washington, the nation's first president, said in his farewell address to Congress. "Reason and experience both forbid us to expect national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

John Adams, the second president, declared: "Religion and virtue are the only foundations, not only of republicanism and of all free government, but of social felicity under all governments and in all combinations of human society."

"Religion is the alpha and omega of our moral law," wrote Thomas Jefferson, the third U. S. president. He contended that the very foundation of individual rights and freedom was in the conviction that "these liberties are the gift of God," beyond the limiting power of any government.

Those early presidents, along with the fourth successor to that office, James Madison, represented a special Renaissance breed of man, cultivated, broad of interests, in a time before specialization, when the cultural objective was to develop a well-rounded "wholeness" of intellect, character and abilities.

"They connected their spiritual beliefs to political action," writes Norman Cousins in a study of their personal papers and correspondence. "They saw no walls separating science, philosophy, religion and art."

Of the first five presidents, two of them, John Adams and James Madison, originally had considered entering the ministry. Adams was a New England Congregationalist. Madison and his successor, James Monroe, were Anglicans (Episcopalians), also the tradition of Washington and Jefferson.

They weren't sanctimonious about it, however, despite the tendency to romanticize about the American forefathers. In fact, although most of the founders took their religion seriously and studiously, they displayed an inclusive liberality of faith, disdaining doctrinaire rigidities and denominational rivalries.

"Ask me not then whether I am a Catholic or Protestant, Calvinist or Arminian," wrote John Adams. "As far as they are Christian, I wish to be a fellow disciple of them all."

Jefferson wrote that instead of there being Quakers, Baptists, Presbyterians or Episcopalians in heaven, "on entering that gate, we leave those badges of schism behind, and find ourselves united in those principles only in which God has united us all .. . Let us be happy in the hope that by these different paths we shall all meet in the end."

In contemporary parlance, they took an ecumenical view ahead of their times, seeing the logically unifying center in one Lord despite the institutional barricades. Washington condemned anti-Catholic demonstrations common then and voiced respect for the Jewish heritage, which Adams and Jefferson also recognized in their lengthy philosophical correspondence as the root stock of faith.

Their encompassing attitudes on religion, especially the inquiring, theological discussions between Jefferson and Adams, have led Unitarianism to claim them in outlook, but it was not their formal affiliation.

The denominational impartiality of their public utterances, in keeping with the new pattern of free religious choice, led sectarian critics to brand them variously as atheists, agnostics and skeptics.

On the contrary, they all consistently avowed belief in God and were churchgoers of varying regularity, but not always in the conventional mold or of exactingly orthodox creed.

Jefferson, a deeply religious-minded man, wrote that despite the slanderers "who make every word from me a text for new misrepresentations and calumnies... I am a Christian attached to the doctrines of Jesus." But his letters stressed confidentiality about his reflections to prevent further "malignant perversions."

Often the early presidents are classed as "deists," and that term can aptly be applied to Jefferson, but not with substantiation to the others.

"Deism" affirmed that God is sovereign creator of the universe, that he is to be worshipped, that worship demands moral conduct, that wrongdoing must be repented, that there is an afterlife of rewards or punishment. But it does not specify innate human sinfulness, Christ's manifestation of divinity nor his atonement for human sin — classic Christian doctrines which Jefferson discounted.

However, he declared himself a "disciple of Jesus" whose teachings offer "the most sublime and benevolent code of morals which has ever been offered to man."

Jefferson, besides being an architect, art patron, founder of the University of Virginia, classical scholar, and linguist in a half dozen languages, was also a probing Bible student. While president, he compiled Jesus' ethical teachings — omitting miraculous elements — into what is now known as "The Jefferson Bible."

In his plan for the University of Virginia, he provided that the "proof of the being of God, the Creator, Preserver and Supreme Ruler of the Universe, the Author of all the relations of morality, and the laws and obligations which these infer, will be the province of the professor of ethics."

Jefferson's parents were dedicated Anglicans (Episcopalians), into which offspring are baptized as infants, and much of his early education was under church auspices. Margaret Smith, wife of the publisher of Washington's first newspaper, the National Intelligencer, writes that when he became president Jefferson regularly attended a small Episcopal church in a frame building at the bottom of Capitol Hill.

George Washington was baptized, married and buried in the Episcopal Church, and for years was a vestryman in his home parish in Virginia.

As commander of the American Revolutionary Army, he authorized chaplains for each regiment, directed troops regularly to attend religious services and repeatedly reprimanded them for that "foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing."

"We can have little hopes of the blessing of Heaven on our Arms if we

Living Yule trees offer versatility

Each Christmas more and more living Christmas trees find their way into California homes. The lasting beauty and versatility make good sense in selecting a growing tree in preference to a cut one.

Indoors, the requirements of a Living Christmas Tree are much like those of a foliage house plant.

Choose a well-lighted room and leave the drapes open during the day.

Keep the roots of the tree moist. If the tree is growing in a container, this simplifies watering; if the root ball is contained in burlap, set this in a can or tub which will catch the drainage. It's also a good idea to fill in the gaps between the container and the root ball with siol, peat or sphagnum moss to keep the root ball from drying out.

Keep the tree as cool as possible to keep it from coming out of dormancy and going into shock. Avoid placing it near fireplace or heat outlets. If the room is kept very cool it may be possible to enjoy the tree indoors for ten to fourteen days, the California Association of Nurserymen suggests one week's time to be on the safe side.

When it's time to move the Living Christmas Tree outside locate it in a protected spot away from drying winds. Hose the foliage down to clean away dust and add moisture to the plant. When the tree has readjusted to the outdoor conditions, it is ready to be enjoyed as patio or balcony specimen. Soil conditions permitting, your tree can also be planted in the garden for years of enjoyment.

Caverns upstaged

STANTON, Mo. (AP) — The multimillion-year-old formations are not the scene most photographed by tourists visting Meramec Caverns here.

Upstaging the formations is a lifelike statue of Jesse James, the notorious outlaw, who used the hideout in the cave during the 1870s.

"Tourists enjoy having their pictures taken in front of Jesse," says Bob Hudson, cave manager.

Market in uncertain mood; oil countries are blamed

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave a mixed performance this past week with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries writing the script.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks managed a 5.91 gain to 979.06.

But Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index dropped .44 to 104.26, and the New York Stock Exchange's composite of more than 1,500 common stocks lost .09 to 56.24.

Big Board volume averaged 25.35 million shares a day, lagging just a bit behind the previous week's 26.66 million pace.

In the past few weeks the market had been buoyed by a wide range of domestic developments, ranging from falling interest rates to speculation over a possibility push by President-elect Carter for a tax cut early in his administration.

In the past week, however, the financial community's attention turned directly to the oil-price outlook as OPEC oil ministers met in Qatar.

The outcome of that gathering — an unexpected split-level price — left the market in an uncertain mood at the weekend.

Eleven of the oil cartel's members declared a price increase of 10 per cent. But Saudi Arabia, the No. 1 ranking oil producer in the group, and the United Arab Emirates demurred, posting only 5 per cent hikes. And Saudi Arabia said it would remove limits it has imposed on its oil production schedules.

At first, on Friday morning, the market greeted the news with jubilation, figuring that a significant crack had appeared in the united front OPEC has presented to the industrialized nations for the past several years.

The Dow jumped more than 5 points in the first half hour of Friday's session. But it quickly turned back again, finishing the day with a 2-point loss.

Brokers said investors seemed to want some additional questions answered before reaching any conclusions about the OPEC situation.

In particular, Wall Streeters noted, it remained to be seen how the oil price picture would develop in the "real world" of the open market. And there was also the question of how the U.S. economy eventually would be affected.

Stocks of the international oils, like the market as a whole, presented a mixed pattern.

In all, 1,091 NYSE issues advanced and 797 declined among the 2,123 traded during the week.

New highs for the year totaled 380 against 17 new lows.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index posted a .87 advance to 104.07.

The Associated Press 60-stock average moved up 2.8 to 327.0.

One year ago: The U.S. Senate voted to halt funding of overt American military operations in Angola.

Today's birthdays: Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev is 70. British actor Sir Ralph Richardson is 74.

Thought for today: Soldiers usually win the battles, and generals get the credit for them. — Napoleon Bonaparte, 1769-1821.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, the Pennsylvania Gazette in Philadelphia published Thomas Paine's pamphlet, "The American Crisis." The memorable opening words were: "These are the times that try men's souls."

Today's hand decided a team of four match. At both tables East won the first trick with the queen of clubs and shifted to the queen of diamonds.

One South decided on a straight forward line of play. He started by losing the trump finesse. Later on he lost the spade finesse and finally had to concede a diamond trick in the cool of the evening to go down one.

The other South decided on a far more complicated line of play that was based on his feeling that East held the king of hearts.

At trick three he ruffed a club in dummy. Then he played ace and one trump. East was on lead with the king and led a high club whereupon South simply discarded dummy's last diamond.

Poor East was dead as a mackerel. He didn't have a second diamond to get off the hook with and had to either lead a fourth club to allow South to ruff in dummy while discarding a spade from his hand, or lead a spade into dummy's ace-queen-jack, which he did not want to do either.

He did that anyway, whereupon it was a simple matter for South to take a ruffing finesse against East's king of spades.

He was lucky but he also had been ingenious. His play would have failed if East held a second diamond and he would really have looked silly if West had held either major suit king.

Ask the Jacobys

A Massachusetts reader wants to know what is meant by the term "Deep-sea finesse."

A deep-sea finesse is one taken against more than two cards. Thus, with A Q 9 opposite x x x you finesse the nine. Once in a while you find that you have picked the jack-ten. If you haven't you still can take the simple finesse against the king later.

Armando Sierra, who won the local district auditions in 1975, also won the regional auditions and went on to the finals in New York where he won $2,000 and concert scheduling. Each year the Met auditions some 1,200 young singers across the nation.

Chicago has individuality

By STAN MIESES

After 10 years and 21 million albums, the rock octet known as Chicago has become a stronghold for pop music. The band's strength lies in its patchwork musical output, which is colored by equal parts of the various personalities in the group. Thus, they really can play something for everybody. The question they raise in concert is: how much is specifically for you?

We caught them in the Capital Center in Landover, Maryland recently, and for us, they just manage to fill the bill. Chicago is best when they play tight, and they could certainly satisfy any audience with an evening of just their shorter tracks. It's hard to believe that "If You Leave Me Now," perhaps their least distinctive single, is their first national number one hit. Rarely has a group with as much diversity as Chicago come up with great singles like "25 or 6 to 4," "You Are My Inspiration," "Does Anybody Really Know What Time It Is," and fans can pick out yet other favorites.

But, there's a streak of artiness that's occasionally unbecoming to a brassy outfit like Chicago. Although they are all excellent musicians, they sometimes come up with jazzy bridges that are in danger of collapsing. Still, they are far less self-indulgent than most pop groups.

"The last tour we did with the Beach Boys," recalled lead guitarist Terry Kath backstage, "we just played a set of our tunes. No jamming. It was a good overall show, but I began to feel like a juke box."

Walter Parazaider, who handles the saxophones and flute in Chicago's well-orchestrated horn section, says that it's the "room" they get individually that keeps them together as a group. "When we first began recording, we tried to figure out a concept for each record, but we wound up putting together tunes by anybody who had them. So every lp has its hard and soft, a few different bags. We've always worked towards making the group a vehicle for everyone in it to do what they want."

That explains the reason why all their albums are numbered, not named. They previewed one selection from the upcoming "Chicago XI" album, an unusually hard, funky, and tuneless number called "Uptown," featuring lead guitarist Terry Kath. Kath, incidentally, told us he's preparing a solo album, only the second solo venture by a Chicago group member in ten years. The other, "Skinny Boy," by keyboard player Robert Lamm, didn't fare too well, saleswise. "It won't take anything away from the group," Kath said. "Chicago has always been top priority."

The 7-inch standard pencil can draw a line 35 miles long, says National Geographic.

Planned in Diamond Bar community

Joint venture provides new homes

A joint venture in which two Southern California land developers are combining their efforts will produce 570 new single-family detached homes in the planned community of Diamond Bar during the next five years.

The $45 million project in eastern Los Angeles County encompasses some 250 acres of land, with grading for the first increment scheduled to begin this month.

Joining forces in the undertaking are Broadmoor Homes, Inc., Tustin, developer of some prestigious residential areas over the past 18 years, and Weatherfield Homes, Santa Ana, formed recently by two leading building industry professionals.

In announcing the new venture, Broadmoor President Richard B. Smith and Weatherfield President Glen Brengle indicated they expect to begin sales of the homes next March.

"Although it may appear to be unique for an experienced developer like Broadmoor to joint venture a home building project, I believe this is an exceptional opportunity for us to enlarge our scope by utilizing the outstanding talents of Weatherfield Home's principals, Glen Brengle and Bill Mitchell," Smith said.

He noted that Brengle has been involved in the construction and home building industries since 1952 and Mitchell, the firm's executive vice president, has been actively engaged in the housing field since 1959.

At the same time, Brengle pointed out that "a joint venture with Broadmoor Homes enables Weatherfield to develop a project of this magnitude which otherwise would be impossible for us, as a new firm."

Broadmoor Homes has been one of the primary builders on Orange County's Irvine Ranch, a showcase among the nation's planned cities. The company's Turtle Rock, Big Canyon and Woodbridge series are among the huge ranch's most successful residential areas. Current Broadmoor developments in Orange County are located in Irvine, Newport Beach, San Clemente and Orange.

Also the development company is engaged in the largest undertaking in its history, a master-planned community on 437 acres at Danville, Contra Costa County, east of Oakland, Calif.

Realtors to aid Santa

The Red Carpet, Realtors of Southern California are pitching in again this year to aid the Marine Corps in their annual toy collection campaign for needy youngsters.

"Toys for Tots" Barrels are now in place at most Southern California Red Carpet offices. Donors can make their toy drop-offs simply by dropping by at local offices.

Orange County Red Carpet, Realtor Matt Whitehead, who appeared on the "Toys For Tots' Telethon on KTLA Channel 5 expressed gratitude for all who gave so generously last year and said that the quality of the gift toys was excellent.

Whitehead pointed out that whenever possible toys donated should be functional and not in need of repair since distribution time is short and the Realtors hope to reach as many or more needy youngsters.

insult it by our impiety and folly," he said in a general order.

Sworn in as the first president on April 30, 1789, his right hand on the Bible, he repeated the prescribed oath, then added words of his own that have been customary ever since, "So help me God." He then bent down and kissed the Bible held by Samuel Otis, secretary of the Senate.

Washington, who as president attended St. Peter's Church in Philadelphia when the capital still was there, issued the first Thanksgiving Day proclamation, a custom since, for Nov. 26, 1789, as a day for offering prayers of gratitude to the "great Lord and Ruler of nations," beseeching him to "pardon our national and other transgressions."

"It is the duty of all nations," Washington said, "to acknowledge the providence of Almighty God, to obey his will, to be grateful for his benefits, and humbly to implore his protection and favor."

John Adams, whose vast correspondence with his wife, Abigail, and others displays a deeply sustaining faith and consuming theological preoccupation, was raised in Massachusetts Congregationalism, and in his student days originally considered entering the ministry.

His youthful diary records his discipline: "I am resolved to rise with the sun and to study Scriptures on Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday mornings and to study some Latin author the other three mornings."

As president, he attended an Episcopal church, since Congregationalism then was confined largely to New England. He wrote:

"The Christian religion, as I understand it, is the brightness of the glory and the express portrait of the eternal, self-existent, independent, benevolent, all-powerful and all-merciful Creator, Preserver and Father of the universe ... It will last as long as the world."

Madison, a lifelong Episcopalian, also originally studied theology for the ministry at Princeton University. But on return to his native Virginia, he witnessed the jailings of Baptists and other nonconformists and got into politics as an ardent foe of religious discrimination.

He became principal sponsor of the Bill of Rights, the first 10 amendments to the Constitution, embodying the guarantees of religious freedom, worked out in an agreement with a Baptist minister, John Leland.

"The religion of every man must be left to the conviction and conscience of every man," Madison wrote. He called Christianity a "precious gift" to humanity but said that for the government to impose it would handicap it and discourage "those who are strangers to the light of revelation from coming into the region of it."

James Monroe, the fifth president, also was a Virginia Episcopalian and attended St. John's Church in Washington, but left no written discussions of his religious views apart from conventional invocations in his inaugural addresses of aid from God, and gratitude for his blessings on the nation.

GAME BREAKER

With 10 seconds left in Saturday's playoff game in Oakland, quarterback Ken Stabler kept the ball for a one-yard touchdown and a 24-21 Raider win over the Patriots.

Los Angeles hopes to end Cowboy jinx

DALLAS (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams come in today's National Conference first-round showdown with Dallas wearing the same brand the Cowboys used to bear—they can't win the big ones.

Los Angeles has made the playoffs five times since 1967 but has not advanced beyond the second round. In fact, the Rams have yet to win a playoff game on the road in that stretch.

Another item weighing heavily on the shoulders of Ram Coach Chuck Knox is last year's 37-7 waxing by the Cowboys, who played their wild card right into Super Bowl X.

Again, Los Angeles, 10-3-1, is the NFC West champion while this time Dallas, 11-3, is king of the East.

The Cowboys have become something of a jinx team for the Rams. It began in 1973 when Knox won the first of his four divisional titles.

The Rams breezed into Texas Stadium and lost 27-17 thanks to an 83-yard scoring bomb from Roger Staubach to Drew Pearson.

Then came last year's debacle. It was 34-0 at the end of three quarters and the Rams didn't have a chance to win in the final period for the first time in Knox' career.

"The Cowboys made my off-season miserable," snarled defensive end Fred Dryer of the Rams. "You can't forget what they did to us. I haven't. We'll be ready for them."

"There's no spot where Los Angeles is just average," says Cowboy special assistant Ermal Allen. "They're No. 1 against the run—they have it all."

Lawrence McCutcheon, who rushed for over 1,000 yards, and steady John Cappelletti will start in the imposing Los Angeles backfield.

Dallas has offensive problems. Quarterback Roger Staubach has been off-form and Landry has installed rusty Preston Pearson, bothered by an injured leg, at tailback. Toy fullback Robert Newhouse, also coming off an injury, has been given the green light.

Staubach completed only five of 22 passes against Washington in a 27-14 loss last Sunday.

But Dallas has been to three Super Bowls, winning one.

They used to be called "Next Year's Champions."

Pat Haden likely starter

DALLAS (AP) — Los Angeles Coach Chuck Knox said Saturday it "looks like" rookie quarterback Pat Haden will start Sunday against the Dallas Cowboys in a National Conference playoff football game.

Knox said, "It looks like it will be Haden. If he does start it will be the fourth different quarterback in four years to start a playoff game for us. I think that is unprecedented in National Football League history."

The other previous starters were John Hadl, James Harris, and Ron Jaworski.

Haden suffered strained knee ligaments in the closing regular season game against Detroit. Haden has been working out and throwing well in practice.

Landry said all the Cowboys are healthy except cornerback Mel Renfro.

Midnight strikes for Washington

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — "It struck midnight for Washington," Minnesota Coach Bud Grant said Saturday after his Vikings rocked the Redskins 35-20 in the National Football Conference playoffs.

"I think everyone saw a highly-emotional Viking team today," Grant said. "Washington just ran out of emotion."

The Vikes struck early, moving 66 yards in the first four plays to take a 7-0 lead. Their offense moved almost at will, building an insurmountable 35-6 lead by the end of the third quarter.

"I didn't think they could do that against our defense," said Washington Coach George Allen. "We felt we had to start fast and control the game in the first quarter—then they went the length of the field and scored that early touchdown. Against their defense, we were in trouble."

The Vikings wrapped up their divisional title several weeks ago while Washington was forced to win its final four games to make the playoffs.

"You can't be super-charged emotionally every week," said Grant of Washington's performance.

Losing quarterback Bill Kilmer agreed.

"Obviously, we didn't play with the same emotion," said Kilmer. "Don't ask me why; ask some psychologist."

Minnesota moved into the NFC championship game Sunday, Dec. 26 on three touchdown passes by Fran Tarkenton and two rushing TDs by Chuck Foreman.

The Vikings strung together three successive 66-yard scoring drives, rolling to a 21-3 lead in the first 22 minutes of the first-round playoff game. Tarkenton's 18-yard touchdown pass to tight end Stu Voigt put Minnesota ahead 7-0 only 99 seconds into the contest.

Sammie White's sprawling catch of another Tarkenton pass in the final minute of the opening period boosted the Vikings to a 14-3 lead. Foreman barged in from two yards out midway through the second quarter.

A 30-yard scoring burst by Foreman early in the third period gave Minnesota a 28-3 lead. The Vikings added some insurance in the final minute of the third quarter when White beat Joe Lavender to haul in a nine-yard scoring pitch from Tarkenton.

The Vikings will keep the home field advantage next Sunday against the winner of the Dallas-Los Angeles playoff. That will be for the NFC championship, a game Minnesota has not lost in three previous appearances. Minnesota finished the regular season with an 11-2-1 record, the best in the NFC.

Washington, which had been limited to a pair of field goals by Mark Moseley, finally scored a TD on Bill Kilmer's 12-yard pass to Frank Grant with 10:42 left in the game played under sunny skies and in 42-degree temperature. Kilmer connected again in the final minute, hitting Roy Jefferson with a three-yard touchdown toss.

Foreman and runningmate Brent McClanahan each went over 100 yards in the game. Foreman netted 105 yards in 20 carries, and the 5-foot-10, 192-pound McClanahan picked up 101 in 20 attempts.

Vikings' middle linebacker Jeff Siemon pulled a calf muscle in the second quarter and was removed from the game. Minnesota officials said his status for the NFL championship game Dec. 26 is uncertain.

Raiders sneak past Patriots

OAKLAND (AP) — Ken Stabler, who runs the football only when it's absolutely necessary, ran the Oakland Raiders into their fourth straight championship game appearance Saturday.

"Leave it to 'Snake' and he'll do it," said offensive tackle Art Shell, using the nickname of the left-handed quarterback who scrambled one yard with 10 seconds remaining for the touchdown which made the Raiders 24-21 winners over the New England Patriots in their National Football league playoff opener.

"With two minutes left, there's no better quarterback in football. You can have your Bert Jones or anyone else. Kenny's the best," said Shell.

"We've been in those situations so mary times. When you do that a couple of times, you gain confidence," said Stabler, describing the winning touchdown drive in the final minutes.

The Raiders, who were behind 21-10 after three periods, advanced to the American Conference title game a fourth straight year. They'll play here next Sunday against either the Pittsburgh Steelers, their conquerers in the last two championship tests, or against Jones and the Baltimore Colts.

"I'm proud of my team and the way we played today. We're going home knowing we played our hearts out," said New England Coach Chuck Fairbanks, composed after the loss with the help of a 15-minute cooling-off period.

Some of his players showed their feelings more graphically, bitterly denouncing the officiating, especially a penalty which kept Oakland's winning drive alive, and the play of the Raiders.

"I was ducking forearms all day. The Raiders better clean up their act," said wide receiver Darryl Stingley.

Tight end Russ Francis, whose nose was bloodied early in the game, snapped later, "No wonder the Raiders always win."

It was all reminiscent of Oakland's regular season opener, a 31-28 victory over Pittsburgh in which the Raiders came from behind in the final minutes and the Steelers later made charges of unnecessary roughness. Two Raiders drew fines from the NFL office after that game.

Stabler's winning touchdown run was on a second down play. He rolled to his left and dove over the goal line untouched by any defender.

"The coaches wanted me to run it on first down but I went to a running play off tackle and it was stacked up so I pulled the play out and tried it then," said Stabler of the play designed as a pass-or-run option.

"Dave Casper (Oakland tight end) is supposed to go down and to the left but he was cut down at the line of scrimmage, so there was no one to pass to. Kenny doesn't like to scramble, but he's got to earn his money by running once in a while," joked Shell.

Two penalties against Oakland in the third period had seemed fatal, helping the young Patriots march 80 yards and 55 yards on touchdown drives.

But a penalty against New England middle guard Ray Hamilton proved to be the costliest of the game. Hamilton decked Stabler after the quarterback had thrown an incomplete pass on a third-and-21 play with 52 seconds remaining in the game.

The Raiders were awarded a first down at the Pats' 13-yard line because of the penalty and completed their 68-yard winning march in four plays.

Stabler passed five yards to tight end Dave Casper, then handed off to running backs Clarence Davis and Pete Banaszak on two plays before surprising New England with his roll-out TD run.

The Raiders, AFC West champions, were slight favorites against New England despite suffering their only loss of the regular season, 48-17, to the Patriots on Oct. 3.

They have won 11 games in a row since then.

The Patriots, 11-3 in the regular season and the AFC wild card qualifier, carried a six-game winning streak into their first playoff test in 13 years.

Jabbar, Lakers beat Portland in overtime

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Kareen Abdul-Jabbar scored six points in overtime Saturday night to carry the Los Angeles Lakers to a 115-111 National Basketball Association triumph over the Portland Trail Blazers.

The loss broke Portland 22-game home court winning streak over two seasons.

The Lakers fell behind 107-103 at the start of the overtime, then came back with 10 straight points for a 113-107 lead with 14 seconds to go. Jabbar had three straight baskets that put Los Angeles in front 109-107 and the Lakers picked up two free throws each by Johnny Neumann and Don Chaney.

Portland had trailed 97-82 with eight minutes to go before using their pressing defense to pull even at 99-99 with 1:15 left on Bill Walton's shot from underneath.

Neumann sank two free throws with a minute remaining to make it 101-99, but Bob Gross made Portland even again 101-101 with two free throws.

Jabbar led all scorers with 35 points. Walton had 28 points and 26 rebounds.

Canadiens blank Kings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Montreal right wing Guy Lafleur scored a second-period goal and injury replacement Bunny Larocque picked up his second shutout of the season to lead the Canadiens to a 2-0 victory over the Los Angeles Kings in a National Hockey League game Saturday night.

Larocque started in goal because regular starter Ken Dryden fractured a toe on his left foot in practice Saturday morning. Larocque lowered his goals-against average to 1.64 on the season as the Canadiiens moved 22 points ahead of the second-place Kings in the NHL's Norris Division.

Lafleur took a pass from defenseman Guy Lapointe to beat Kings goalie Rogie Vachon just past the midway mark of the session. Center Doug Jarvis scored on an empty net after Vachon was pulled for an additional attacker in the closing moments of the game.

Dodgers promote Jimmy Williams

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Veteran minor league manager Jimmy Williams has been named manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers Class AAA Pacific Coast League farm club in Albuquerque.

Greenwood peps Bruins

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sophomore forward David Greenwood scored a career high 31 points and pulled down 23 rebounds Saturday night as ninth-ranked UCLA overpowered Tulsa 110-85 in a nonconference basketball game.

For the second game in a row, forward Marques Johnson failed to play because of a knee injury, but he wasn't needed by the fast-breaking Bruins.

The Golden Hurricane, 1-5, stayed within seven points of UCLA in the first half despite 19 points and 12 rebounds by the 6-foot-9 Greenwood.

The Bruins, 5-1, then outscored Tulsa 20-4 during a five-minute stretch which included a run of 14 straight points to take a 79-58 lead midway through the second half.

Teko Wynder's 28 points paced the losers.

Greenwood had never scored more than 16 points or grabbed more than 15 rebounds as a Bruin, but the tall, strong corner man was all over the court Saturday night.

Most of his buckets came on long jump shots, and he also showed power inside.

Greenwood's previous best rebound performace — 15 in a game — came Friday night as the Bruins beat Rice 107-60. In that contest, Greenwood did not start because he had been disciplined for missing a team meeting.

Locals shine in Chaffey Tourney

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

The Chaffey College Tourney finals Saturday night had a distinct local flavor.

A fired-up Citrus College squad captured the third-place trophy in the tourney with a 79-75 upset of Riverside City College. Mt. San Antonio came home with the consolation crown with a hard-fought 66-62 decision over El Camino.

West L.A. surprised Pasadena City College, 61-54, for the tourney title in Saturday night's final game. West L.A.'s Mike Woolsey captured tourney MVP honors.

Citrus' Steve Barnes made the all-tourney team, as did MSAC forward Robert Vigil. RCC's Ron Baldwin and Mike Williams of West L.A. completed the all-tourney five.

It was a good tourney all around for Citrus' Owls. They upset Golden West and RCC, defeated Glendale and lost by a lone point in overtime to West L.A. The 3-1 tourney mark gives Citrus a 7-5 season ledger.

Damien High product Mike Wetenkamp sparkled at both ends of the court for Citrus Saturday. The 6-2 freshman poured in 20 points, including a crucial basket with 5:48 remaining in the contest which put the Owls ahead for good at 65-63.

Wetenkamp followed that hoop up by connecting on two key free throws to push the Owl advantage to 67-63, and the locals then held off the Tigers in the late going to post a most impressive triumph.

Citrus took a 40-30 lead at halftime vs. the Tigers, but RCC came out running-and-gunning in the second half and forged ahead 48-46 with seven minutes gone in the half. The lead remained in Riverside hands until Wetenkamp's four crucial points.

Owl forward Barnes added 15 points to the victory margin, and also was strong on the boards. Playmaking guard Derrick Thomas netted 12 points, while Tim Jarvis came off the bench in place of foul-plagued Eric Childs and pumped through 11 markers.

Sharp-shooting forward Kevin McClanahan led the Tigers with 20 points, followed by Baldwin with 18 and Jerry Potter with 15.

MSAC overcame a sluggish start to down El Camino for the consolation title. The win gives the Mounties a 7-3 season ledger.

Near-perfect outside shooting by Vigil and aggressive rebounding by Earner Mays and Steve Nichols made the difference for the Mounties, who rallied from a 24-14 deficit at the start of the game to post the triumph.

Vigil, after a slow start, finished strong to net 17 points. Mays led the Mounties with 18, with guard Dick Rockwood adding 12 and Nichols seven.

Brett Beaver led El Camino with 14 points. El Camino is now 5-6 on the year.

Keough added to Dodger staff

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marty Keough, former major league player and scout for San Diego the past eight years, has been added to the Los Angeles Dodgers scouting staff.

Scouting director Ben Wade announced Friday that Keough would work in California's Orange and San Diego counties and in Arizona.

Keough, who attended Mt. San Antonio College and the University of Southern California, lives in Newport Beach.

Poly women capture title

By BRENT SHYER
PB Correspondent

Most basketball fans probably haven't heard yet about one of the finest teams in the valley. So here goes!

The Cal Poly Pomona women's basketball team won the Cal Poly Second Annual Invitational Tournament title Saturday night with a convincing 81-67 victory over the Long Beach State 49ers.

The Broncos displayed a total team effort to win the crown against the feisty 49ers. Last year in the same tournament, Long Beach State defeated Cal Poly, 55-53, in the championship contest, so the Poly win was a most successful way of making up for that loss.

In the third place game, Cal State Northridge downed USC, 84-73, while in the consolation championship contest San Francisco State whipped Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, 54-49.

The Broncos had defeated USC earlier in the day in the semifinals by a 96-68 count. Long Beach State blasted Cal State Northridge, 83-66, in the only other semifinal game.

The Broncs are an exciting team to watch, mainly because of their team concept of play. Coach Darlene May keeps all the players fresh and ready to play at any time during a game, and the well-rested individuals seem to give an all-out effort on the court.

Cal Poly played three games in the tournament and outscored its opponents 290-173. For any team in the college ranks averaging 96.6 points per game is impressive.

"During the whole tourney we had a total team effort," said coach May. "I think we still have a long way to go but in the last three games our maturity level has increased 100 per cent."

Joan Uhl led the Broncos in the championship game. Uhl had 19 points and 11 rebounds. Center Mary Reichert added 14 points and pulled down a game high 18 rebounds.

Poly led 45-35 at halftime and eventually built its biggest lead of the game at 70-50 with just over six minutes to play.

Poly outrebounded the 49ers 50-29 which was a major factor in the win.

"If we continue to control the boards, we'll be tough on everybody," said mentor May. "I think that our strengths are our bench and the great depth we have."

In the semifinals, Cal Poly came through with its second straight big win in the tourney. The Broncs blasted the USC Trojans, with 12 of Poly's 13 players contributing points in the 28-point rout.

Reichert was the leading scorer and rebounder for Poly with 19 points and seven boards.

Linda Scheenstra also had another fine game with 14 points and six rebounds. Scheenstra, formerly of Chaffey High, had 15 points against San Diego State in the opening round of the tourney.

Nastase triumphs

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Ilie Nastase of Romania and Manuel Orantes of Spain will do battle Sunday in the semifinals of the $320,000 World Championship Tennis Challenge Cup matches to decide who will face American ace Jimmy Connors in the $100,000 winner-take-all final next April 10.

Nastase, defending WCT Challenge Cup champion, blitzed the aging Rod Laver of Australia 6-3, 6-1 Saturday to gain a berth in the semifinals.

Orantes, who upset Nastase in the round-robin competition Thursday night, gained a semifinal berth by defeating spunky American Harold Solomon 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

Nastase kept Laver off balance and struggling in every game with an overpowering serve which Laver claimed was the most effective Ilie has had against him in seven matches.

This was Laver's fifth loss in seven tries against the fiery Nastase, who kept his famed temper under wraps throughout the series.

"I played well, I served well," said Nastase, who had earlier claimed that the "Supreme Court" surface at Caesar's Palace was very slow, making the play too slow.

Nastase said, "I am getting used to the court now, and feel confident against Orantes."

Steelers go for third straight

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers, their Steel Curtain defense more terrifying than ever, launch their playoff drive for an unprecedented third straight Super Bowl championship today against the Baltimore Colts.

A sellout crowd of 60,020 was expected in Memorial Stadium for the nationally-televised (NBC-TV) American Football Conference contest featuring the Pittsburgh's stupifying defense and Baltimore's explosive offense. The Steelers were favored by three points.

After losing four of their first five games, the Steelers rolled over nine consecutive opponents even with rookie Mike Kruczek starting at quarterback in six of the games for injured Terry Bradshaw.

Bradshaw has started only three games while recovering from two injuries and will be ready for the Colts, but even without him, the Steelers scored respectably while Franco Harris and Rocky Bleier each topped 1,000 yards rushing.

It was, however, the defense which week after week kept Pittsburgh from being eliminated. Five shutouts were posted during the nine-game streak, and 16 of the 28 points allowed were scored in one game.

The Colts have immense respect for the Steelers, but feel they don't receive equal respect for their own league-leading offense which racked up 417 points during an 11-3 season.

In addition, the Colts feel they are far better prepared to face the Steelers this year than they were in losing 21-10 in the first round of the conference playoffs in 1975. That defeat ended a nine-game Baltimore winning streak.

Quarterback Bert Jones, who tossed 24 touchdown passes for the Colts this season, was injured on the first offensive series last year and didn't return to action until the fourth quarter.

"We have a lot more poise this year," said defensive tackle Joe Ehrmann of the Colts. "We're not in awe of the Steelers. We know we can beat them."

"We were like new kids on the block last time," said running back Don McCauley, "and Pittsburgh had been there before. It's not the same this time."

"We were a bit satisfied just to be in the playoffs last year," said linebacker Stan White. "But now that we've been there, we don't want to settle for anything but playing in the final game."

Neither do the Steelers, who have survived nine weeks of pressure football to stay alive just to get into position to set the Super Bowl record.

Tangerine Bowl

Cowboys demolish BYU

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — All-American running back Terry Miller romped to four touchdowns, including a tacklebreaking 78-yard burst through the line, to trigger Oklahoma State to a 49-21 Tangerine Bowl football victory over Brigham Young Saturday night.

Oklahoma State's defense got the Cowboys moving after a fumbling beginning, scoring the first touchdown and setting up the next two with pass interceptions. Then Miller and company got the offense moving and turned it into a rout.

As expected, Oklahoma State made virtually all its yardage on the running of Miller, exciting sophomore Farland Dindy and workhorse fullback Robert Turner, while Brigham Young's major offense was the passing of quarterback Gifford Nielsen.

But four interceptions hurt Nielsen's effectiveness and his team's chances.

Twice, Oklahoma State got a two-touchdown lead only to have Brigham Young's Western Athletic Conference co-champions come back to within a score.

Dave Lowry, punting and running only eight days after an appendectomy, returned the second half kickoff a bowl record 102 yards to narrow the gap to 28-21.

Oklahoma State's Big Eight Conference tri-champs, scored three touchdowns in the third quarter and put the game out of reach at 49-21.

Miller ran 23 times for 173 yards, a bowl record. Dindy, who replaced him and played much of the second half, had 68 yards in seven carries.

Garey High captured the Banning Tournament as the Vikings defeated Indio 71-61 while Ontario Christian took the Notre Dame Classic by beating Mary Star of the Sea, 59-54.

In other hoop action Saturday, Western Christian knocked off La Verne-Lutheran 59-54 and Don Lugo High captured the South Hills soph Tournament over West Covina, 61-60.

The Vikings, who trailed 32-31 at halftime, outscored Indio 23-10 in the third quarter of action to salt away the contest as they improved their seasonal record to 6-2.

James Lofton, who was named the most valuable player of the Banning Tournament, pumped in 23 points to pace Garey to its victory. Herbie Banks was named to the all tournament team.

Indio hurt itself in the third quarter of action as it handcuffed itself with numerous fouls. Hank Bouwman paced Ontario Christians' scoring attack with 22 points. Pete Verhoven added 12 points.

USC loses to Baylor

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Baylor's Larry Spicer dumped in 28 points as the Bears edged Southern California 84-83 in the consolation game of the Sun Bowl Basketball Tournament Saturday night.

Southern Cal led 49-40 at the half, but Baylor scored 11 straight points to get back in the game.

With seconds to go and Baylor leading 82-77, USC popped two field goals with Paul Henderson connecting on one and Mark Hoisington sinking the other.

But Baylor guard Larry Rogowski canned two free throws with 10 seconds remaining.

Marv Safford led USC's scoring with 18.

Baylor's season record stands at 4-3 while USC's slate is 2-6.

Raiders win

Fred Biletnikoff, the veteran wide receiver who tormented New England's defense with nine receptions for the day, caught two passes from Stabler on the winning drive which started with 4:12 remaining.

In the final minute of the first half, Biletnikoff fought off New England cornerback Bob Howard in the end zone and pulled in a 31-yard scoring pass from Stabler, which gave Oakland a 10-7 halftime lead.

The Patriots dominated the first half statistically, running 42 plays to Oakland's 25. New England scored first on Andy Johnson's one-yard plunge which ended an 86-yard drive highlighted by tight end Russ Francis' one-handed catch of a 40-yard pass.

Late in the first period, Oakland's Errol Mann kicked a 40-yard field goal to make it 7-3.

In the third quarter, Pats' quarterback Steve Grogan threw 26 yards to Francis for the touchdown that sent New England ahead again. Late in the period, former Raider Jesse Phillips ran three yards for a TD, making it 21-10. On both drives, covering 80 and 55 yards, respectively, the Raiders forced New England into punting situations but were called for penalties on the kicks, giving the Patriots the ball back.

The Oakland fourth-period comeback began with a 70-yard drive. Stabler hit Biletnikoff, who totaled 137 yards on his receptions, on passes of 17, 11 and 10 yards, keying the march.

That made it 21-17 with 11 minutes to go. But the Raiders went nowhere on their next possession and the AFC West champs seemed doomed when the Patriots drove into Oakland territory with five minutes left.

But another New England penalty, an offsides infraction on a third-and-one play at the Oakland 28, hurt the Patriots. After an incomplete pass, John Smith missed a 50-yard field goal attempt the Raiders took over for their final, winning drive.

Sports briefs

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Majors of the No. 1-ranked University of Pittsburgh and Dennis Douds of East Stroudsburg, Pa., State College were named Saturday as winners of the New York Football Writers' Eastern Coach of the Year awards.

The writers group also will present a special recognition award to Clary Anderson, longtime coach at Montclair, N.J., High School and later at Montclair State College. Anderson retired after the 1975 season.

DENVER (AP) — John Ralston has been asked to relinquish his duties as general manager of the Denver Broncos to veteran club official Fred Gehrke but will remain as head coach, owner Gerald Phipps announced Saturday.

Gehrke, who has been with the Broncos since 1965, currently is assistant general manager of the National Football League team.

Phipps, in announcing the staff changes at a press conference, said he felt "a separation of duties will enable John to devote his total time and efforts toward continuing the improvement of our football team on the field."

Smith, Lutz paired again

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — "Isn't it wonderful to see Stan Smith and Bobby Lutz playing doubles together again," a matronly lady in the stands gushed Saturday at the Tucson Racquet Club Ranch.

"Vintage Smith and Lutz—it's great," a male companion replied.

Thus it was that a crowd of approximately 4,000 saw the resurrection of one of America's greatest doubles teams as Smith and Lutz, at their finest, cut down Mexico's Raul Ramirez and Emilio Montano 6-2, 6-3, 6-4 for a clinching victory in the North American Zone Davis Cup tennis semifinals.

The towering Smith and the stocky Lutz first teamed up as teenagers, won numerous tournaments and became one of the best teams in the world before going their separate ways six years ago.

"We have not played at all on a regular basis since 1971," said Lutz. "For two years there we didn't play at all as a team. Then, in 1973, I was out six months with a knee problem and later I had knee surgery. In 1974 Stan developed trouble in his racquet arm and, as you know, his career went into a big slump.

"Now we are both healthy and strong again. This was one of our greatest matches ever. I am sure we will play more together next season."

Smith, who suffered arm trouble at Wimbledon in 1974, is just now recovering from a tragic dip in his career which saw him tumble from being ranked No. 1 in the world to 21st in the pro standings. He hasn't won a tournament in more than a year.

Against the Mexicans the pair was superb. Smith was the dominant figure on the court, posing an almost inpenetrable barrier with his tremendous height, long legs and arms. Almost every time you looked, he was smashing a ball into the stands.

Lutz, on the other hand, was demonstrating the quickness and speed that has made him perhaps the No. 1 add-court player in the game.

Both players praised captain Tony Trabert for his sideline guidance as they won easily over a player who is rated world's doubles champion, Ramirez, and his nervous partner, Montano.

"I was concentrating on hitting my forehand returns cross court," Smith said, "but Trabert told me that I should occasionally blast one at Ramirez. I did and this worked very effectively."

Smith also said that it was Trabert who suggested that the two of them try to get off to a quick start to keep Ramirez from gaining confidence and to concentrate on attacking young Montano.

"This was Trabert's strategy and it worked well."

The triumph gave the Americans an insurmountable 3-0 lead in the best-of-5 series and turned the final two singles matches today into meaningless exhibitions.

Roscoe Tanner of Lookout Mountain, Tenn. plays Roberto Chavez in the first match, with Arthur Ashe meeting Ramirez in the final contest.

The hard-serving Tanner, reversed a losing habit against Ramirez by winning Friday 7-5, 6-4, 6-4. Ashe, playing his 31st Davis Cup match in a career spanning 10 years, downed Chavez 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

The two-day sweep without loss of a set assuaged American wounds from losses to Ramirez and his Mexican teammates the last two years.

Washam, Rodriguez move up

MIAMI (AP) — Pert little Jo Ann Washam and Chi Chi Rodriguez came from two shots back with a third consecutive 68 and moved into a tie for the lead Saturday after three rounds of the $200,000 Mixed Team Golf Championship that has men and women touring pros competing together for the first time iin a decade.

Jo Ann and Chi Chi birdied six of eight holes at one stretch and actually held a two-shot margin at one stage but then dropped back into a tie with Sandra Post and former British Open champ Tom Watson. Miss Post and Watson, who had a second-round 63, managed a third round 70 in the bright warm sunshine.

The two teams completed 54 holes in 204, 12 under par on the Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

This selected drive alternate shot competition, in which both players hit from the tee, pick the one they want then play alternate shots on the same ball, appeared to have developed into a two-team race.

It was another four strokes back that Penny Paulz and Australian David Graham composed a 70 and a 208 total.

Sylvia Bertolaccini and Jim Colbert were next at 69-210 followed by Marlene Hagge and Dr. Gil Morgan at 72-211.

"You have to expect a letdown after shooting a 63," Watson said, "And after those first four holes we were sure having one."

He and Sandra were two over par for the day at that point before Miss Post's deadly putting rallied them again.

She birdied the fifth from 10 feet, needed only a three-footer after Watson's bring-it approach on the ninth and Tom kept them within sight of the Rodrigues-Washam team with a 10-foot birdie on the 10th.

Sandra scored from 15 feet on the 12th, and Watson's approach to three feet set up the tying birdie on the 15th.

The veteran Rodriguez called his partner, "The best woman player I have ever seen. She swings like Ben Hogan. I call her 'Little Hogan'. It's just a matter of time before she takes over the ladies tour."

They operated primarily off Jo Ann's drives in the birdie streak that started on the fifth hole.

NAIA, NCAA talking things over

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics and the National Collegiate Athletic Association, sometimes bitter rivals in the past, disclosed Saturday they have been talking over conflicting dates, playing rules and international competition.

Their joint announcement said negotiators held their first meeting Dec. 1 and there will be another in late January or early February.

Each organization was represented by two officers from member schools and by its executive director.

The announcement said their discussion covered seven areas:

—Common dates for schools to declare whether they will compete in the NCAA or NAIA championships in football, basketball, baseball, soccer, hockey and volleyball.

—Coordination of post-season football playoffs and bowl games, including NCAA recognition of the NAIA playoffs.

—Amateurism and limits on financial aid.

—International competition.

—Government problems.

—Common playing rules.

—Television coverage.

Government problems presumably include those stemming from federal insistence upon equal support for women's sports.

A statement issued by the presidents of the two groups said:

"We feel the lines of communication are wide open, and the first meeting reflected a great deal of common interest and mutural respect. We believe a great deal of progress can be made to bring our two associations more closely together."

For years, there was a tendency for larger colleges and universities, particularly those with big sports programs, to join forces in the NCAA while smaller schools flocked to the NAIA. There has been some duplication of membership and a tendency for the NCAA to court rapidly growing schools with expanding sports programs.

Steven Senko, director of athletics at Rutgers, is president of the NAIA. His colleagues in the first discussion were Clark Swisher, an NAIA executive committee member who is director of athletics at Northern South Dakota State, and Harry Fritz, NAIA executive director.

John A. Fuzak, faculty athletic representative at Michigan State, is president of the NCAA. He was joined by Stanley J. Marshall, who is the NCAA's secretary-treasurer and director of athletics at South Dakota State, and by Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA.

Tee to Cup

Loosen up for team competition

By Phil Roche
PB Staff Writer

I know a bunch of fellows who can't punch in a 2-foot putt when they're in an individual tournament. But you turn these same players loose in team competition or scrambles or partners, and they're knocking in 40 footers and blasting out of the traps next to the pin.

These are the gunners just waiting for team play. So the SCGA accommodates them each year with a spirited, well-organized team competition.

It begins in January for the 77th time, and features inter-club play. The program, which features a format of both Thursday and Sunday matches, extends through February with six consecutive weeks of home and home competition. In March the playoffs are held.

Chairman Peter Patman has announced that this year's matches again will be played "at the lowest handicap of the last 12 months."

A new rule allows teams to play their Sunday matches on Saturday if the home team so desires.

Anyway, the team players are rubbing their hands and getting ready for the big season. As for me, include me out.

If I miss a putt, I feel as though I let the whole team down, and they'll never forgive me. And you know something? They won't.

Gregg Brown, popular starter at San Dimas Canyon, will be leaving this week for Northern California where he'll be working for the H and B Company, distributors of sporting equipment.

A bunch of the top players at San Dimas will hold a going away tournament for Greg on Monday. I'd like to add my best wishes to a starter who perpetually smiled and had a good word for all. May the wind be at your back always, Greg.

Art Shilling, head pro at Canyon Crest C.C., has been named golf coach at the University of California at Riverside. The 37-year-old Shilling replaces Ken Riley, who is now playing on the PGA tour.

Shilling graduated from Northern Arizona U., where he was the starting quarterback in football and he played shortstop on the Lumberjack baseball team.

The five-page golf instruction section in Golf Digest this month features Jack Nicklaus as usual. For simplicity, presentation and information, it is the best teaching feature I have ever seen. Worth a $1, believe me.

Well, here's one guy who's not sorry to see 1976 end. During the past year I have been sidelined for two months with a back sprain, four weeks with a torn tendon and just recently with a left eye infection.

I was feeling sorry for myself until I wrote about the recent tournament in L.A. for BLIND golfers. No more complaints. I'm happy just to see part of the ball. Anyhow 1976 wasn't my year.

Winners in the Western Hills December Member-Guest tournament were Betty Miller and Sible Uphouse of Candlewood, Ida Morgan and Millie Hawley of Candlewood, Bette Eckels and Emilie Borba of Red Hill, Maxine Mellick and Helen Lewis, Alta Vista, Betty Young and Tillie Bracci of South Hills, Marge Padfield and Joan Smith of Hacienda, Alice Miller and Marlene Lowe of Candlewood, and Bonnie Goolsby and Helen Mohr of Palos Verdes.

Joe Hederman of Chino hit an 8-iron shot into the hole for an ace on Dec. 11 on No. 17 at Los Serranos, North Course. We hope it isn't a once-in-a-lifetime shot. The hole is 143 yards long.

Ben Crenshaw and Pat Bradley have been named the Most Improved Professionals of 1976, and Jerry Pate is the Rookie of the Year, Golf Digest Magazine reports.

Crenshaw won three official tour events—the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, the Hawaiian Open and the Ohio King's Island Open to earn the Byron Nelson Tournament Champion Award for the most tourney victories of the season by a tour player. He raised his winnings from $63,528 in 1975 to this year's $257,759, second best on the tour.

Miss Bradley, who scored her first official tour victory by beating Judy Rankin, Sandra Post and Bonnie Lauer in a four-way sudden-death playoff at the Girl Talk Classic, raised her LPGA tour winnings from $28,294 to $84,288.

Pate won three tourneys, including the U.S. Open, the first rookie to win that event since Jack Nicklaus did it in 1962. He also won the Canadian Open and the Japanese Masters and set a rookie winnings record with $153,102.

Grand Prix to host high school racers

The first valley high school racing champion will be determined at the Grand Prix track on East End Avenue in Pomona.

Qualifications which will determine the class (freshmen, sophomore, junior and senior) from each school are being held now through Dec. 28. The fastest official time logged prior to the 28th will determine the class champions.

The four class champions from each school will run off four laps each, two free and two for which they will have to pay, on Dec. 28 starting at 6 p.m. This will decide the school champion.

School champions will drive two laps, both free, in the same car on Dec. 30 beginning at 6 p.m. to determine the overall Valley Champion. The fastest single lap time determines all winners.

Trophies will be awarded each school champion with a large trophy also going to the Valley Champion.

Angels again earn organization award

ANAHEIM — For the second time in the past three years, the California Angels have earned the "Baseball Organization of the Year" award from TOPPS Chewing Gum, Inc.

The Angels, who earned similar honors in 1974, received the 1976 trophy during the annual winter baseball meetings by virtue of having the most players in their organization receive TOPPS awards during the past season.

First baseman Willie Mays Aikens and outfielder Thad Bosley were named minor league players of the year in the Texas and California Leagues, respectively.

California totaled five minor league player of the month selections and had seven players placed on the minor league all-star team as voted by the National Association of Baseball Writers.

Bosley, a 20-year-old speedster, hit .324, drove in 72 runs and established a league record with 90 stolen bases for Salinas. He was voted California League player of the month for May.

The Angels' No. 1 choice in the January, 1975 draft, Aikens hit .317 and led the Texas League with 30 homers and 117 runs batted in while finishing second in doubles with 24. The 22-year-old southpaw swinger earned player of the month honors in July.

Other Angels' player of the month winners — all in August — were third baseman Ron Farkas, El Paso; righthander Dave Steck, Quad City and first baseman Don Lyons, Idaho Falls.

Fitch uses his ready wit

CLEVELAND (AP) — There was a time when Coach Bill Fitch had to laugh along with the rest of the world at his Cleveland Cavaliers.

"If I don't laugh, I'll start crying," the slim Irishman always explained.

It was during those early years of the expansion-born Cavaliers that the youngest of Fitch's three daughters came home and told her parents she had hit a boy in the mouth because the youngster said his dad could coach better than hers.

"I told her that next time she should find out what his dad would have done different— then poke him," Fitch said.

He knew what he was getting into when he took the job as the Cavaliers' first coach in March 1970. Asked how soon the team would be a winner, he'd shrug and say, "I'm Bill Fitch—not Houdini."

Now, the Cavaliers have reached beyond respectibility into the realm of National Basketball Association winners, but Fitch still uses his ready wit and acid tongue to get a few points across—both to the media and his players.

A few weeks ago, the Detroit Pistons buried the Cavaliers beneath an avalanche of points in a now-rare rout. An unhappy Fitch walked up to forward Campy Russell, who did not play a very good game, and asked, "How many complimentary tickets did you give out tonight?"

Russell innocently answered, "About 20, I guess."

"Well, they're all outside our dressing room asking for their money back," Fitch roared.

Fitch, who had a very successful career as a coach at Coe College in Iowa, Creighton University, North Dakota University, Bowling Green University and the University of Minnesota, never lets his thoughts stray far from basketball.

"Basketball is my life," he often says. "I have no hobby."

After the regular season two years ago, Fitch and Boston General Manager Red Auerbach took two teams of NBA players on a tour of Japan. Fitch's team kept getting wiped out by Auerbach's and it galled the Cleveland coach until Auerbach finally told him, "Look, just face it. You couldn't win with those guys if we let you."

After that, Fitch relaxed a bit and said, "From then on, I confined my strategy to getting my team on and off the bus and bringing them home safely. I didn't lose a man."

Fitch, now 45 and voted NBA Coach of the Year for 1975-76, has always been a little unorthodox in his approach to pro basketball after 17 years in college coaching. One thing that surprised some observers was his attitude toward playing preseason games.

The Cavs played few preseason games until this year and Fitch would always say, "It may cost us a game or two at the beginning, but we're not running a sprint. The way I look at it is we're going to fish in troubled waters 82 times a season."

And, despite being the restless type who once flung a chair onto the court after disputing a referee's call, Fitch says, "I don't have an ulcer. But I'm a carrier."

Zorn says he's no hero

SEATTLE (AP) — Jim Zorn became Seattle's first bigtime football hero despite the Seahawks' 2-12 record.

In his first season, he threw the football more often than any of his peers. He threw for more yards than any first-year National Football League quarterback before him.

His rifle-arm throwing and scrambling acrobatics captured the fancy of Seattle's frenzied football fans.

But the 23-year-old Zorn a graduate of Cal Poly Pomona, says he is anything but a bigtime football hero.

"I'm just a regular dude like anybody else," he says.

He owns a Volkswagen with 80,000 miles on it. He prefers denims and sweatshirts to fancy clothes. He doesn't like big, boisterous crowds. His strongest expletives are "heck" and "doggone."

He's cocky yet cool, confident yet quiet, undaunted yet unassuming.

But most of all, Zorn says, he's a Christian.

"I really have a faith in Christ," he said. "I just want to live my life as Christ would live it.

"For example, if I'm out there on the football field, and if I was representing Jesus Christ, how would he play football? How would he react to these situations? He'd be going all out 100 per cent and he'd want to learn all he could about the defense, about the personnel and how to defeat that defense.

"I want to learn as much as I can about football, but most of all I want to know what I can do as a Christian."

Zorn, who signed with Seattle as a free agent after the Dallas Cowboys and Los Angeles Rams decided he was expendable, is stopped on the street for autographs. Jim Zorn T-shirts are big sellers. His telephone is unlisted.

Despite the attention, he has maintained a boyish innocence.

Unlike some of his peers, he doesn't throw money around, feed his ego with flashy women or party a lot.

"I don't want to go off the deep end spending bucks on things I don't need," he says. "I've got a really nice Volkswagen. I baby it, and it's super.

"As far as a girl in each arm, I don't have a steady girl friend or anything like that, but I date girls. I like girls, but I just haven't really found one yet that I can settle down with.

"If I have some free time, I just enjoy either talking to somebody, just walking or playing dominos or not even doing that. I just can't get into being with a whole mess of people all the time."

He says that despite pep talks from Jerry Rhome, Seattle quarterback and receiver coach, he sometimes places undue blame on himself for his team's failures and tries too hard to be perfect.

"I feel that my ability should be so up to par because I am a disciplined person," he said. "I really enjoy doing well and making zero mistakes. But it seems like sometimes I make more than my fair share, and I guess that's the pressure I'm putting on myself. Instead of going out there and just playing, I'm saying, 'Hey, I can't make mistakes' and then I do and then it gets worse. But I'll be handling that better next year."

Zorn has been described as the next Fran Tarkenton. He likes the compliment because Tarkenton is a super quarterback. "But I'm me. I wouldn't like everybody to say that's a Fran Tarkenton. I'd like them to say, 'Hey, that's Jim Zorn.'"

Zorn will be negotiating a new contract next season, but he says money isn't the only thing in pro football because the game has taught him a lot and has created new challenges to pursue.

"The game has given me a really neat insight to life; life's pressures and life's battles. It's almost like a psychology class. People react different ways to different things you do and say.

"I hope I can learn and overcome my weaknesses for next year to become even better. Each year there's going to be new ballplayers coming up to try and beat me out at my position. I'll have to be that much better each year to be the best I can on the field.

"I hope I can give so much to this team by being the best I can, and that's all I can do."

Top sprinters enter Sunkist Invitational

LOS ANGELES — One of the great sprint fields in indoor history has been lined up for the 18th annual Sunkist Invitational Saturday afternoon, Jan. 15, at the Sports Arena, Chairman Al Franken announced.

There will be twin 50 and 60-yard dashes. The lineup will be Houston McTear, Steve Williams, Don Quarrie, Dwayne Evans, James Gilkes, Guy Abrahams and probably Hasley Crawford.

McTear, possibly the fastest starter in the history of the sport, is coholder of the 100-yard dash record of 9.0. Williams shares the world 100-meter mark of 9.9.

Quarrie won the 200 at the Montreal Olympics and finished only 2/100 of a second behind Crawford in the 100.

Evans was the sensational prep who won the bronze medal in the 200 at the Olympics. Gilkes is a former NCAA 220 champion from Guyana and USC who was denied a chance to run the Olympics when his country pulled out.

Abrahams finished fifth in the Olympic 100 meter.

Draft now illegal

NFL, players seek agreement

NEW YORK (AP) — How much is a Tony Dorsett or a Ricky Bell worth on the open market?

They soon may find out, if the National Football League and its players association cannot reach a compromise on the college draft.

A federal court has declared the college draft, the major method by which NFL teams stock their rosters, illegal and in violation of the antitrust laws. That sets up three possibilities for bringing new talent into the NFL in 1977:

—The open market, which would be the result should labor and management not reach an agreement.

—The present draft system, which was ruled illegal but could still be resurrected by an appeals court.

—Some middle ground.

"You can't eliminate any of the three possibilities. We haven't," said Terry Bledsoe, an official of the NFL Management Council, the league's bargaining body. "The possibility still exists for reaching agreement with the union. We haven't forsaken hope. I don't think the union has either."

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, has made several suggestions for modifying the college draft:

—Conduct the draft as usual, and, if a player hasn't signed a contract by May 1, an arbitrator is brought in to decide the length of contract and salary.

—Have separate drafts in the NFC and AFC.

—Have the college players chosen by a maximum of three or four teams.

—Not have a draft at all, but limit the number of rookies a team can sign.

Garvey says if no agreement is reached, "what's left will be the open market." He would, of course, be happy with the open market—similar to the vehicle which recently made millionaires out of some of baseball's top free agents. They weren't rookies, however.

In a year when baseball and basketball have resolved their labor disputes, football looks like the defensive back who's been burned by a long touchdown pass—alone and embarrassed.

The NFL hasn't had a labor contract since 1974. Both sides are still talking about such things as benefits, pensions, the Rozelle Rule and the draft. But so far, it's been just talk.

"We talk and show a little progress, but nothing substantive," said Bledsoe. "They haven't accepted the draft, and we haven't gone for unrestrained bidding."

The draft is just one issue that divides the NFLPA and the NFL into labor and management.

The other important issues are the reserve clause, which binds one player to one team, and compensation. In the NFL, compensation goes by the name of the Rozelle Rule, which allowed Commissioner Pete Rozelle to decide what compensation a free agent's former team gets from a free agent's new team. The rule, however, was struck down by a federal court and is being appealed by the NFL.

We can't sell what we haven't got and there aren't any extra-cost, factory-installed options on our Volvo 264 GL sedan. Everything's already there. (Even your choice of transmissions — automatic or 4-speed manual with overdrive — is a free choice.) What a luxury! To buy a luxury sedan that was built by a factory. DEAR POLLY — When a heavy cold makes it necessary to use tissues a cellophane sandwich bag carried in one's purse or a man's pocket keeps the used tissues in a sanitary package so the germs are not spread around. — RUBI.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — An easy way to shell green peas fresh from the garden is to pour boiling water over the peas in a bucket, cover and let stand for three or four minutes. Strip down a pod and if the peas pop right out they are ready to shell. Pour the hot water off, add cold water and shell as you take them from the bucket. — MRS. J.B.

DEAR POLLY — When you want to take a bottle of soft drink along on an outing, put two ice cubes in the bottom of one of those round potato chip cans, then put in the unopened drink can, add two more ice cubes and cover with the plastic lid. It stays cold for quite a time. — RUTH.

DEAR POLLY — Our cat walks under the car and gets grease on his fur. We have learned that rubbing cornmeal on the grease and then brushing it out of his fur removes the dirt along with the grease. — MISSY.

DEAR POLLY — For cookouts, I put plastic wrap around the top of each glass of tea and then punch a hole in the center of the wrap for a straw to go through. Foils the flies! — TODD.

DEAR POLLY: To get the most paint from a spray can, be sure to shake often — before and during the spraying operation. — MRS. E.O.P.

DEAR POLLY — Use baby oil and a toothbrush to clean off the residue left by decals you may have removed from the tub or shower. I find this works wonders. — SANDRA.

DEAR SANTA:
I hate to complain,
but the Jump rope you brought me last year was very shoddy.
One handle was loose, and the rope frayed in a very short time.
A little more quality control and a little less "Ho, ho, ho" might be a good idea.

DONNA COMBES OF NEW BERN, NC, ASKS: "HOW DID THE HAMBURGER GET ITS NAME?"

THE HAMBURGER GETS ITS NAME FROM HAMBURG, GERMANY, A CITY WHERE A KIND OF "HAMBURG STEAK" MADE OF SHREDDED RAW MEAT ONCE WAS A POPULAR DISH. IT IS FROM HAMBURG THAT THE AMERICANS BORROWED THE "HAMBURGER" AND PUT IT INTO A BUN TO CREATE THE HAMBURGER SANDWICH. TODAY, ANY KIND OF GROUND-UP MEAT IS CALLED HAMBURGER EVEN THOUGH IT IS FAR REMOVED FROM THE ORIGINAL VERSION OF HAMBURG, GERMANY.

Michael Landon stars as an Olympic Gold Medal Winner in "The Loneliest Runner," on The NBC Monday Night Movie at 9PM. The 90-minute drama was written and directed by Landon, and tells of the emotional problems suffered by a 13-year-old who still wets his bed. Landon says that the story is autobiographical in every sense but one—"I never won an Olympic Gold Medal."

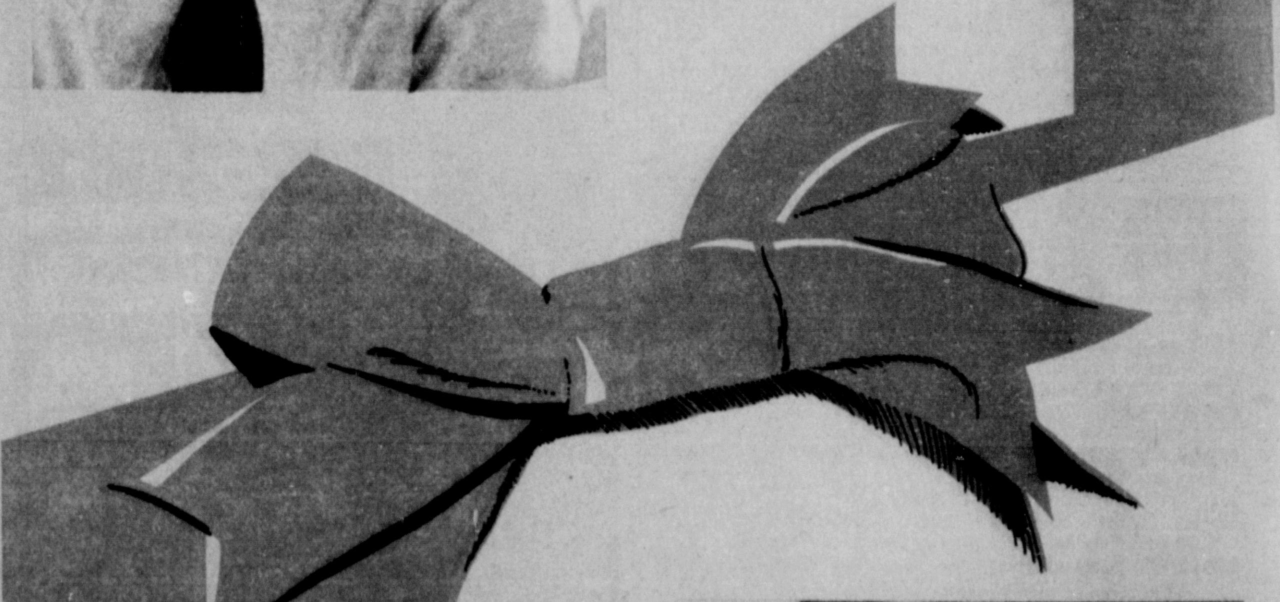
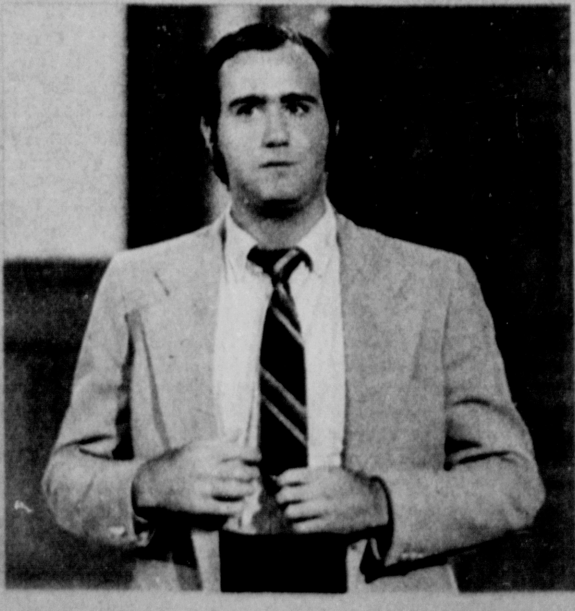
Ron Howard stars as Richie Cunningham in Happy Days (Tuesdays at 8PM) on ABC, in the series about teenagers in their senior year of high school in a Milwaukee suburb. While Richie and his classmates, Potsie Weber (Anson Williams) and Ralph Malph (Donny Most) begin to speculate on where they will go to college, Fonzie (Henry Winkler), the "cool" dropout, becomes even more influential in their lives in offering them his worldly wisdom about the opposite sex.

Ron Howard has had the good fortune of having worked with some of Hollywood's major talents since his acting debut as a small child. And now he has added the names of John Wayne and James Stewart to his impressive list of distinguished fellow-actors. While on hiatus from Happy Days, he co-starred with them in "The Shootist."

Away from the studio, Ron spends much time writing, filming and directing his own cameras. His ultimate goal is to become a director. Ron made his debut when he was four years old in the film, "The Journey," starring Yul Brynner and Deborah Kerr.

Howard, formerly a cinema arts major at the University of Southern California, attends Los Angeles Valley College, Van Nuys, California, when his schedule permits.





Dick Van Dyke hopes to build a "family" on his new NBC series Van Dyke and Company, Thursdays at 8PM—and the first member of that new family is a young comedian named Andy Kaufman, who was such a hit on his first appearance that Dick has signed him as a regular cast member. Dick first spotted Andy doing one of his comedy routines on NBC's Saturday Night series starring Chevy Chase.

Michael Constantine tries to comfort his well-meaning staff when the "victory party" they have planned falls flat with his defeat, in "The Election" episode of NBC's Sirota's Court Wednesday at 9PM.

'YOUNG MAN IN A HURRY'

Wesley Eure has learned that it isn't always easy to be in two places at once. He portrays Mickey Horton in the daytime drama on NBC's Days of Our Lives (12:30PM), and he also stars as Will Marshall in the Saturday morning children's show, Land of the Lost, also on NBC.

Both shows are currently in production, Days of Our Lives at NBC in Burbank and Land of the Lost at the Goldwyn Studios in Hollywood, almost 10 miles away. This presents a problem in logistics for Wesley. To meet the tight schedules of both shows he must bounce from one to the other—and he isn't made of rubber. Which makes it all the tougher.

Eure does not work every day on "Days," but his presence is required every day on the children's show. When working, his hours at NBC are from 6AM to 4:30PM. Then he must get over quickly to the Goldwyn Studios where he will work sometimes until 10PM. Then he is up the next morning at 5AM to go over his scripts for both shows and the whole routine begins again.

Is it too much for him? "Not at all," replies Wesley. "I love it. Fortunately, I'm young and can still absorb this kind of punishment. Besides, it's fun to say I'm acting in two network series simultaneously." There are not many actors who can make a statement like that.

Wesley is proud of the fact that he has always been able to maintain his difficult schedule and has never caused a delay for cast and crew in either show.

But there have been moments of near panic. "I never take off my makeup after finishing 'Days,'" he explained, "It saves time when I go on the set at Goldwyn. One time my car broke down on the way over and I had to flag a truck down for a ride. The driver let me aboard but he didn't talk much on the drive. Just kept shooting me sideways glances. I'm sure he thought I was a bit peculiar."

Wesley Eure may be a young man in a hurry; but he knows where he's going.

CLOSE-UP

'SHE PREFERS COMEDY'

Shelley Fabares loves to do comedy. "Getting paid to do what I really love to do is fantastic," commented the pert and pretty star of NBC's The Practice comedy airing Wednesdays at 9:30PM. "I'm really much more comfortable with comedy than I am with drama," Shelley expanded. "When you're in a dramatic role, you must draw upon and display very personal emotions, very private feelings. I'm naturally a very reserved person, and this to me is an invasion of privacy."

While most of Shelley's career—embracing such series as The Donna Reed Show and the more recent Little People—has been devoted to comedic roles, she has not shied entirely from drama. She starred as Brian Piccolo's wife in the poignant TV movie Brian's Song, a true-life drama about the dying football star. "The emotion I felt for the story, the truth of it, transcended any inhibitions I might have had," she explained. "Brian's Song was a wrenching experience, but I'm proud to have been a part of it."

Shelley pointed out that The Practice—in which she plays daughter-in-law Jenny to the irascible Dr. Jules Bedford (Danny Thomas) — is a comedy with dramatic overtones. "That's a thin line to tread, but that is what makes the show so interesting from an actor's standpoint, in my opinion." During this year's summer hiatus in The Practice production, Shelley guest-starred in an adventure drama episode of Spencer's Pilots.

At present, Shelley has no acting plans beyond her current series. "I love to work and I like the constancy of a series. I like to know where I'm going each day. I'm a very structured person. In addition, I love the people I'm working with."

Even though Shelley has been performing since age three, she insisted that she never stops learning from others. "I learn from everyone I work with, but mostly from Danny," she said. "He does a style of comedy I've not done before. He has a more volatile kind of comedy than I've done before. He has the most incredible sense of timing of anyone I've ever been around. His comedic sense is unerring. I hope I can continue to absorb, to learn through osmosis. The real learning process takes place during rehearsals, watching the way Danny attacks certain lines, working with the lines to get the most out of them."

One way or another, Shelley Fabares has had an audience most of her life. Born in Santa Monica, she started dancing lessons and modelling at age three. At seven she was an extra in a movie and at nine she appeared in a television special with Frank Sinatra. Millions of Americans watched the little girl growing up as Donna Reed's daughter on The Donna Reed Show a dozen years ago. Later she played Brian Keith's daughter in the Hawaii-based Little People.

'Joker Was Reborn'

The recent "reborn" success of The Joker's Wild is one of those things that happen only once in the lifetime of a TV game show creator and host.

Jack Barry created and hosted The Joker's Wild which enjoyed a 3½ year run on CBS television's daytime schedule. When the show finished its course on the network, Barry and his partner, Dan Enright, began to work on other projects, such as his currrent Way Out Games, Break the Bank, and The Joker's Wild. That is, until Dick Colbert, head of Colbert Television Sales, a TV syndication firm, began to feel that "Joker" had not really reached even a fraction of its potential during its multi-year run on CBS.

Colbert convinced Barry, who owns the show, to let him show The Joker's Wild to some independent station executives. Colbert then arranged for The Joker's Wild to be aired on KHJ—but instead of airing it during daytime hours, the station's management decided to air it in the 7:30PM time period.

The results have been sensational. The Joker's Wild has become KHJ's highest rated program, sign-on to sign-off. Its rating is the highest of any show ever aired in that time period in the history of the station. What's more, the success of the show has upped the ratings of both the lead-in shows and the programs which follow "Joker."

'NOTHING'S IMPOSSIBLE'

Ten original magic illusions never performed before on television will highlight this year's edition of "Doug Henning's World of Magic" on NBC, Thursday at 8PM. Keyed to the theme that "nothing's impossible," the special airs live, before a live audience, with hand-held cameras zeroing in on a variety of apparent impossibilities. Henning promises to make a full-grown, four-ton elephant vanish. He says he'll sit—on absolutely nothing—in mid-air, and appear out of nowhere, in a cage of suspended neon tubes.

Back on the ground, he'll levitate a girl on a row of fountains, and then as the streams diminish, he will pass a hoop of fire around her still-suspended body. A stream of water will be handed around as casually as a pencil, and flowers will appear inside bubbles. "I'm going to control the elements," maintains Henning. "I'll produce people from fire, I'll vanish in fire. I'll hold fountains in my hands, I'll produce things out of nothing and I'll float a lady in the air—nothing's impossible."

There are other apparently impossible illusions scheduled on the upcoming holiday special. Last year's "World of Magic" attracted more than 60,000,000 viewers—or about half the people who were watching TV at the time. Henning calls this year's performance "see-through magic," because of the transparent plastic props that conceal nothing from the audience. Suspended in air, or raised off the floor on legs, most are isolated in space, making it apparently impossible for anyone or anything to get in or get out. That's what makes it magic.

This see-through magic is a radical departure from the traditional thick black boxes, black hats and red capes traditionally used by magicians. The airiness of the staging, Henning believes, creates a light, lyrical, theatrical experience of wonder. "I'll use natural things—the elements of fire, air and water," Henning says. "We're getting away from the old tricks, the carnival and circus atmosphere. We're going all the way this year, elevating magic to thelevel of a great theatrical art."

In addition, he says, "there's lots more audience participation this year," with several opportunities for people in the studio to come up on stage and assist in the illusions. Henning's special magical guest this year will be Ricky Jay, a young, contemporary, comedy close-up magician.

Red Buttons, who won an Oscar for his performance in "Sayonara," and Lionel Stander, the gravel-voiced character actor who has filmed more than 300 motion pictures and television show, have been signed to star in "The Sunshine Boys," a half-hour projected comedy series for NBC. Written by Neil Simon, the project, which is a joint venture between Ray Stark Productions and MGM Television with Michael C. Levee as executive producer, Sam Denoff as producer and Robert Moore as director, is based on Simon's hit broadway play and motion picture.

As the team of feuding Vaudeville comics, Buttons plays the part of Willie, an irascible comic, while Stander plays the part of Al, a retired entertainer. Singing on street corners for pennies as a kid growing up in the Bronx, Rud Buttons' career really began when he was hired as a singing bellhop at Dinty Moore's City Island Tavern. The shiny buttons on his uniform combined with his red hair gave him the nickname, which became a permanent change from Aaron Schwatt.

World War II broke out at the same time Red was set for his movie debut in a Paramount picture. As an Air Force private, he received a break when cast in a leading role in Moss Hart's "Winged Victory," which ran on Broadway several months, toured the country and was filmed. Among Red's biggest thrills in the service came when he entertained at the Potsdam Conference before an audience including President Truman, Josef Stalin and Winston Churchill.

Upon discharge, Buttons returned to Broadway in the Max Schulman comedy "Barefoot Boy With Cheek." Red continued as one of the top entertainers, and in 1952, launched his own television show which ran for three seasons. Buttons' many film credits include "Hatari," "The Ticklish Affair," "Your Cheatin' Heart," "Stagecoach," "The Poseidon Adventure," "They Shoot Horses Don't They?" and "Gable and Lombard." He has just completed two feature films, playing co-starring roles in Irwin Allen's "Viva Knievel" and Walt Disney's "Pete's Dragon."

Lionel Stander rose to fame as a radio comic voice in shows with such personalities as Fred Allen and Jack Benny. he was imported to Hollywood in the 1930's and his tough-guy performances highlighted many films. A native New Yorker, Stander was cast in hundreds of gangster pictures. But after an enforced acting hiatus, necessitated by political activism, Stander became a New York stockbroker in 1950. In 1965 he returned to Hollywood to appear in "The Loved One" and most recently was featured in "The Black Bird" and "New York, New York," which will be released next spring.

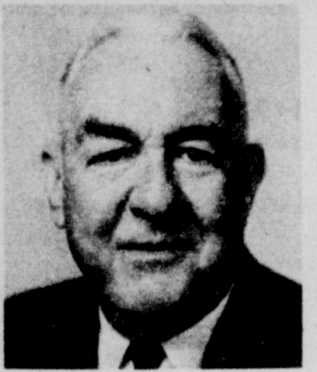
FAMILY WEEKLY

SEASON'S GREETINGS

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.



FOR SAM ERVIN, former Senator

At this Bicentennial Christmas, do you think the founding fathers would be pleased with what we have accomplished? What would they find irritating about our system of government?—J.M., Washington, D.C.

● I think they would be delighted with what we have accomplished. During the last two centuries, we have attempted to keep as close to their concepts as is humanly possible. I'm sure they would be pleased that the country which they founded has grown and prospered the way it has. But I'm positive they would deplore the fact that the Government has adopted a welfare program which often robs people of their incentive to strive for financial independence.

FOR CAROL BURNETT, comedienne

As a child, what convinced you there was a Santa Claus?—M.B., Joliet, Ill.

● We'd just moved, and I couldn't figure out how to let Santa know where I was. I hoped when he got to our old home, he'd find the note I left for him with our new address. On Christmas morning I rushed to the tree to see what was there. I wasn't disappointed. There was a tiny box for me with a 25-cent patent leather coin purse inside. That was my best Christmas ever—I knew Santa was smart and that he cared.

FOR CLEVELAND AMORY, founder of The Fund for Animals

Why doesn't your organization run a campaign at Christmas encouraging parents to buy pets for their children?—A. Sommerville, Fort Myers, Fla.

● Never! A pet is not a toy for children to play with, then tire of, as they do with dolls and building blocks. However, if the parents seriously believe their child will help be responsible for the pet's welfare, I urge you to make your choice at your local animal shelter. The best pet on earth is a mutt or an alley cat.

FOR JULIA CHILD, gourmet

Did you ever "goof up" on a Christmas dinner?—P.N., Altoona, Pa.

● The year we entertained two sets of nieces and nephews. One niece is a fine cook, but the other niece and her family are exactly opposite—they eat mostly convenience foods. Well, I started out with cheddar cheese soup, and the gourmets enjoyed every mouthful. The others said, "Ugh, what's that," and pushed it away. Same with goose and red cabbage; one set wolfed it down; the others looked like they were going to be sick.

FOR SHELLEY WINTERS, actress

What was your most poignant Christmas?—B.C., Clarksville, Tenn.

● It was during the Depression. My girl friend and I were longing to make our homes look pretty and colorful, and we were flat broke. We "borrowed" a few gold trinkets from our homes and hocked them. We never got to buy the tinsel and stuff, however, because we were discovered before we could spend a cent. And our parents made us get back the stuff we'd pawned.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

I'm fascinated by ghost stories. Do you have a nice Christmas one for my collection?—B.G., Waco, Texas

● We sure do. Heard this from Catherine Schell of TV's Space: 1999. A few years ago she spent the holidays on a huge Virginia estate. Christmas Eve night, Catherine was awakened by the odor of smoke. She went out to the corridor but found nothing smoldering. She went back to sleep, but again she awoke. The smoke fumes were overpowering, but the room was clear. Then, to her horror, she saw the face of a man who was rapping at the window. Behind him was a wall of flame. Catherine rushed to the window, but the vision faded. Next morning she learned that many years ago the wing of the house where she slept had burned down. The cook had rushed through the house, waking the family and hastening them to safety. He, however, perished in the flames.

FOR FRANK GIFFORD, ABC sportscaster

What was your funniest Christmas experience?—L.R., Flint, Mich.

● Don Klosterman and I were playing in a college all-star football game on the West Coast. Christmas Eve we went partying in San Francisco and stayed out until 6:00 A.M. As we were creeping into our dorm, we came face to face with the coach. "Where have you been?" he demanded. We said very innocently: "Not where have we been—it's where are we going? It's Christmas morning, and we're off to Mass." We ended up in church.

FOR BARBARA WALTERS,
co-anchor of the ABC Evening News

This year I'm giving my first big Christmas party. Any tips to help me make it a success?—R.J., Elmira, N.Y.

● If it's a buffet, I like to serve things that can be eaten without a knife. Put lots of snack tables around, so your guests don't have to balance trays or plates on their laps. See that every couple knows at least one other pair. At a sit-down meal, I like to shuffle my guests around for dessert (there's nothing wrong with two women or two men sitting together), just for a change of scene.

FOR DON KIRSHNER, rock impresario

Do teenagers still love carols the way they did when I was a kid?—B.Z., Rome, Ga.

● All in all, I'd say they go for it. As with most things, it's a matter of taste. There's a wider variety of musical styles for youngsters to choose from than ever before. Some enjoy nostalgia, while others favor a modernized version of a traditional carol. Also, newly recorded carols often attract fans because of the artist recording it.

FOR RONA JAFFE, author of The Last Chance

Do you think people who aren't avid readers appreciate receiving books as Christmas gifts?—S.A., Yuma, Ariz.

● Yes, because they are the ones who would never buy books for themselves. Non-bookworms appreciate books in their area of interest (cookbooks, stock-market reports, for example). Anything in the "how to" field or a best-selling novel is a good bet. If you're really stumped for ideas, give a gift certificate. Even if I weren't a writer, I'd still give books because they endure.

THE CHRISTMAS I'LL NEVER FORGET

Wide World

Jimmy Dean

Mary Welsh Hemingway

Melba Moore

Phyllis Diller

By Neal Ashby

ANNA MOFFO has gone from Wayne, Pa., where she grew up as the daughter of a shoemaker, to sing in the opera houses of the great cities of the world—Vienna's Staatsoper, London's Covent Garden, the Teatro de Colon in Buenos Aires, our own Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

"At the age of 20, I was spending my first Christmas away from home, studying voice with the Rome Opera on a Fulbright scholarship. It was a melancholy time for a girl who'd had a sheltered childhood in a small town. To make matters worse, I couldn't find a Christmas tree to give some holiday atmosphere to my tiny apartment. In Rome, decorated Christmas trees weren't the custom.

"Back in November I had auditioned for singing work at a Rome radio station. But I was never called back and was convinced I wouldn't be. Then, a couple of days before the holiday, the station did call. 'Come over tomorrow morning,' a man said, 'we're going to have a hookup with a lot of stations in the United States, and we want you to sing 'Silent Night' to Italians in America.'

"I rushed over, and they put me in this bare studio with an announcer.

"When I finished 'Silent Night,' someone came in and put earphones on me, and there was the voice of my mother back in Pennsylvania, saying, 'Dear, you sang like an angel!' Mother and I laughed, talked and cried while audiences in Italy and the U.S. listened.

"I didn't have a tree that year, but it was a wonderful Christmas just the same."

JIMMY DEAN, country singer, worked as a field hand and cleaned chicken houses at the age of 10 to help ease the poverty of his family in Plainview, Texas. In his teens, his mother taught him to play the piano, and in the Air Force he blossomed as an entertainer who could also tell country jokes and whimsical stories. His recording of "Big Bad John," which he wrote, was the first of several hit records. Dean has had his own network TV programs and is in demand on talk shows and at state fairs, rodeos and Las Vegas hotels.

"At home in Plainview we were really poor—sugar-sack shirts and all that. Treats that cost money were pretty scarce, and a Christmas tree was a treat! We never had one; just saw them through other people's windows. On Christmas Eve, Mom gave my brother Don and me a stocking to hang up, and on Christmas morning we usually found some hard candy, an orange and maybe one toy in our stockings.

"I finally caught up, and bought my first Christmas tree just after I was married. My wife Sue and I had taken a little place in Seat Pleasant, Md. I went out and bought the biggest tree I could find. We covered it with tinsel and ornaments, but that wasn't enough for me. I added a load of that fluffy, white angel hair. I wanted a tree I'd never forget. And I never have forgotten it, though our trees have been more modest since that first one."

MARY WELSH HEMINGWAY was a magazine reporter in Paris when she met Ernest Hemingway, already a famous author. They married not long after and for 15 years lived an eventful life in Africa, Cuba and Idaho, until his death at 62 in 1961. Ms. Hemingway describes their years together in a new book, How It Was (Knopf).

"I've spent Christmases in Minnesota, where I grew up, in New York City, London, Venice, Paris, Havana and Ketchum, Idaho. But the most unusual one was observed at a place called Kimana Swamp, in Kenya, at the base of Mt. Kilamanjaro, in 1953. Ernest and I were on a six-months' safari, hunting lions, jaguars, antelopes, eland, wildebeest—whatever we chanced to find. As Christmas approached, I thought of the grove of umbrella thorn trees I'd seen a few miles from our tent camp. They had white spiky thorns on them that were at least an inch long. One of those thorn trees would be our Christmas tree, I decided. We dug one up and transplanted it outside our tent.

"I flew into Nairobi with our pilot in our little plane and bought tinsel, old-fashioned wax candles that you clamp on the tree and Christmas presents for Ernest and the 21 tribesmen who were our guides, gun bearers, trackers, skinners and cooks.

"On Christmas Eve we gathered everyone beside the decorated thorn tree, and I made my little speech in horrible Swahili. The men were all Moslem, and I told them this was one of our important Christian celebrations, and I hoped they wouldn't mind. They all stood quite respectfully and quietly in their green konzas, which are like nightgowns. I had wrapped the gifts in Christmas paper and ribbon: a suede vest for Ernest and, for each of the men, a prized pound of lard, pound of tea, pound of rice and a hunting knife. They were all delighted.

"Ernest gave each of us a big bear-hug. It was a very joyous Christmas!"

MELBA MOORE, pop vocalist well-known to television and record audiences, has sung in Broadway musicals and for the President's guests at the White House. Most recently, she's appeared at Paris' famed Olympia Theater and presented a one-woman show at the Metropolitan Opera House, the first woman to do so at the Met.

"I always remember three or four Christmases that were very much alike when I was a little girl growing up in Harlem. My mother was a singer in cocktail lounges and nightclubs, under the name of Bonnie Davis. She was always working at Christmas time. On Christmas Eve, I'd be in our apartment with our housekeeper, a wonderful woman I called Mama Lu. The two of us would work late into the night preparing for the next day. We would clean, iron linens, wax floors, fry chicken and bake pastry until after midnight. I loved all of it, but I'd always be worrying that Santa Claus would walk in on us. Fortunately, he never did.

"The next morning, after a few hours' sleep, I'd get up to find a lot more had been done. The apartment was all decorated, and a lighted Christmas tree was there. And, what was the grandest gift for me, my mother was home to spend Christmas with us."

PHYLLIS DILLER has become probably the nation's top-ranking female standup comic though she never set foot on a stage until she was 37. She's gone far and fast with her bumbling housewife gags, each followed by her raucous laugh. Diller has played all the major supper clubs and TV variety shows, has written books and has acted in plays and in nine films.

"When I was a student at Sherwood Music Conservatory in Chicago after high school, the highlight of my year came one Christmas time. I was hired to sing soprano in a chorus that was to perform Handel's Messiah before a large studio audience and over the radio at a big Chicago station.

"All of the girls in the chorus were to wear long white dresses. I didn't have one. And there wasn't much time to get one. Luckily, a friend said she could lend me a white dress and would leave it for me in the Conservatory cloakroom.

"I rushed in on the day of the performance, grabbed the big box left in my name and dashed to the studio. Dressing with the other girls, I opened the box—and my gown was black! I would have been the wicked witch among the angels!

"All I could think of was to rush around the corner to a department store and buy a white sheet. The girls pinned me into it. A Halston it wasn't, but, in the back row, I guess I blended in passably well.

"I was thrilled to be a part of the performance. But I couldn't laugh about the shock of seeing the black dress until years afterward!"

This lovely lady—Rachel Carr, author of "Yoga For All Ages"—IS REPLACING DEADLY TENSION WITH SOARING NEW STRENGTH AND ENERGY! Yet, to an outside observer, it looks as though she is doing nothing at all! This is the great marvel of Healing Yoga— that it produces such phenomenal returns in beauty, strength, appearance and vitality for such a tiny investment in time or energy! No wonder it can be enjoyed by 80-year-olds, or arthritics, as well as robust teenagers! No wonder its simple postures (like this one) seem to "smooth away" both years and pounds from the very beginning! Why not try these incredibly-easy "body-reshapers" and "revitalizers" today—without risking a penny!

IS THIS THE World's Easiest Yoga?

So incredibly easy that anyone can master it! And yet so powerful that it may cut years off your appearance...recharge your body with youthful energy... turn back on sleeping "Health Glands" inside your body! And do it all—in just a few glowing minutes each day!

Call It, If You Will, "Healing Yoga!" Made Up Of SIMPLE HEALING POSTURES THAT REDIRECT THE ENERGY FLOW WITHIN YOUR BODY To Help You To:

1) Gently stretch "weak muscles" strong again! So that they gain new strength, new power, new slimming control—not by agonizing effort—but by the super-nourishing blood-flow that these stretches pour into those muscles!

2) Flood with the same super-nourishment the tragically-neglected upperbody tissues of your face, neck and hair—and thus retard the drying and collapsing process that is aging your appearance faster and faster every year!

3) Revitalizes dormant "Youth Glands" inside your body! Put gentle, soothing pressure on them for a few blissful moments each day, so they automatically burn more of the food-fuel you put into your body! So you use the fat stored on your waist, hips and thighs as a brand-new supply of energy, to ward off fatigue and sluggishness at the same exact time that you look slimmer and feel younger than you have in years!

And—perhaps most important of all—

4) Attack directly—with Nature's own health powers—unnecessary sicknesses and breakdowns that may be torturing you today! So that you feel for yourself the effect of these simple postures on such agonizing cripplers as arthritis . . . rheumatism . . . respiratory illnesses . . . high blood pressure . . . back troubles . . . insomnia . . . shattered nerves . . . and a dozen more!

Such startling relief, in fact—so quickly—that the author must share it with you, in these joy-filled words:

"At first I found the sudden intake of oxygen a little startling. I experienced a surge of vitality as though I had opened the window for a breath of fresh air; yet the quieting effect it had in my mind was hypnotic. . . . My step took on bounce, and a wonderful sensation of well-being stayed with me. The pain in my joints and back, which had plagued me for years, subsided. With relief I discarded the traction device I had used nightly . . ."

And All These Benefits Come From Simple Postures That May Seem, At First, Too Easy For You! In Fact, You May Actually Laugh At Them—UNTIL YOU FEEL THE SURGE OF NEW ENERGY COURSING THROUGH YOUR BODY!

Once again, this new, simplified, streamlined Yoga works on the proven scientific principle that you cannot force . . . you cannot strain . . . you cannot torture your body into releasing again the buried reserves of strength and vitality that are now trapped within it!

For example, you know perfectly well how exhausted you feel after ordinary strenuous exercises . . . how they become progressively more and more difficult to practice . . . how your body finally forces you to give them up, and sink right back again into ever-increasing flabbiness, sagging facial and body tissues, an ever-growing sense of feeling "old and beaten" by life!

But—right now—do you have the energy to simply lie on the floor, and breathe in and out five times in a brand-new way? It takes only minutes to learn the method! You may chuckle at it at first! Until you feel the surge of super-charged oxygen revitalizing every tired tissue of your body!

And then, do you have the energy to simply raise your arms over your head—in the special way we show you while you are lying on the floor—and stretch your body gently and luxuriously from head to toe! And feel so much trapped tension drain out of that body that you may actually want to dance around the floor in sheer delighted joy!

Yes, and do you have the energy to play a simple trick on those flabby stomach muscles, that sucks them gently in close to your spine for a few strength-producing seconds . . . and that can make you look inches thinner in just a few blissful days!

And would you like to tighten up the vital muscles in your face, chin and neck—at the same exact time you flood them with fresh nourishing blood—all with one or two simple stretching exercises! Or start slimming over-heavy calves and thighs . . . tone up sagging breasts and hips . . . the hanging flesh on the undersides of your arms—all with the same easy gentle stretching movements!

Once Again, They Produce Results That You Can Gain In No Other Way! For Example:

Cleansing Breaths! Sort of Super-Sighs, that let you breathe weariness right out of your body!

Why the best tranquilizer in the world doesn't cost you a penny! It's yours on page 10.

Blood-Stream Purification. Forces your body to burn up potentially damaging inner secretions that may have been clogging your cells for years. You may feel the difference—thrilling new freedom from indigestion alone—immediately!

Yoga Sex Exercises specifically designed to stimulate lagging sex glands!

What is perhaps the single most powerful pose to delay aging in the human body (page 38). And why it may release a virtual torrent of self-healing processes!

How to re-distribute weight the Yoga way! How you can look like a young person if you have an old person's bulges distorting your figure. Yoga works on those bulges to painlessly redistribute that weight over your entire body . . . and help eliminate ugly bulges that have plagued you for years!

Yoga Revitalizers For Your Face, Your Hair, Your Spine, Your Teeth!

How to flood your face with blood at least once a day—the effortless way—and not only use the power of gravity to help build up instead of tear down delicate facial tissues that are now collapsing into lines and wrinkles, but also: stimulate mental processes . . . irrigate the gums and roots of your teeth to help increase their strength and longevity . . . and flood your scalp and hair follicles with the same rich nourishing blood!

Plus:

A simple way to avoid incomplete elimination!

How to stretch lower back pains away! Make those stiff joints mobile again! That stiff spine as supple as a kitten's!

Deep internal massage! To tone up the liver, kidneys and pancreas . . . firm the stomach . . . increase the gastric fire and therefore the powers of digestion . . . lead to true inner cleanliness!

What Yoga can do for you to improve varicose veins, swollen ankles and feet!

How to restore elasticity to stiff joints—without pain—especially knees, ankles, shoulders, hips, wrists, and finger-joints!

Folds in the neck—they are not inevitable if you know this simple posture on page 30.

How to cleanse nasal passages . . . calm the mind . . . help relieve sinus and other headaches . . . reduce eye strain and fatigue . . . strengthen optic nerves and muscles—all in the same posture!

Health-Power postures that anyone, of any age, can do in a chair!

The great Yoga cure for over-strained nerves! Starts to work immediately, in minutes! May be worth a hundred trips to a psychologist! Its fantastic ability to induce sound sleep, even in confirmed insomniacs, may alone be worth the low price of this book!

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

The crippling pain of arthritis sent Rachel Carr to the study of yoga. Following the system of exercises she outlines in Yoga for All Ages, she managed to loosen her rigid spine and knee joints and to dispense with the traction equipment she had used at night to stretch her spinal column. From that beginning, she went on to study yoga in depth and to become one of America's most noted teachers of the subject.

Prove It Yourself— Entirely At Our Risk!

But there is so very much more! You really must try these great Health-Power Postures yourself to believe them! Therefore we offer this Complete Streamlined Course to you, to read and use from cover to cover, entirely at our risk!

Look again at the unretouched photograph of the author above. Realize again that, only a few years ago, this woman was in literal agony from the pains of arthritis . . . in such poor health that she could not sleep at night without traction!

Is it worth a few minutes of your time to learn the Path Back to youthfulness and health that she discovered! That now makes her feel young, strong, supple!

CELEBRITY COOKBOOK
By Marilyn Hansen

How the Real-Life Walton Kids Spend Christmas

JOHN BOY
"In real life, I'm the Christmas cook."

Richard Thomas practically grew up backstage at his parents' ballet company in New York. Christmas was considered "special" by the Thomases, a day when they were all together.

This Christmas, Richard and his wife Alma will celebrate their second Christmas together. Continuing in the Thomas tradition, Richard himself will buy and cook the Christmas dinner. "We're going to have Roast Goose," he says, "with my own 'secret' stuffing as the star of the menu. Then I think we'll top it off with Plum Pudding and Hard Sauce—and, of course, steaming hot coffee."

MARY ELLEN
"This year I'm roasting my very first turkey!"

A native Californian, Judy Norton/Taylor really enjoys being on "The Waltons." "It's given me a better idea of what life was like in the Depression years of the 1930's." She has learned that if families "stick together in good or bad times, things can be worked out."

Christmas means a lot to Judy, too...especially those fabulous holiday dinners. As a newlywed, she's looking forward to Christmas '76, and plans to continue the family tradition with her very first roast turkey dinner.

JASON
"I love Yorkshire Pudding!"

English-born Jon Walmsley is a serious young actor and versatile musician...as well as a gifted soup artist. After late evening jam sessions, he'll frequently serve up some hot soup, blending two or three varieties.

At Christmas, Jon joins his parents for a traditional Walmsley English dinner.

"Mother's specialty is Yorkshire Pudding," says Jon, "which she serves with roast beef and garden fresh vegetables."

ERIN
"When I think of Christmas, I think of cakes!"

Believed to be a descendant of Andrew Jackson, Mary McDonough's family heritage goes back a long way. So Christmas is a time for reunion. Long tables are set up, and every family contributes to the meal. "We have turkey, ham, salads, vegetables, and all kinds of cakes. My mother is famous for her Poppy Seed Cake. I can make it, too!"

Of course, the McDonoughs aren't the only ones that have to eat. So every Christmas Eve, just before going to bed, the children set out cookies and milk for Santa, and a carrot for Rudolph.

From the angel's hair to the candy canes, the Walton kids enjoy decorating their special Christmas tree.

BEN
"My mother is a cookie specialist."

18-year-old Eric Scott is one of those special people born right in Hollywood. "I think being raised in a show business atmosphere makes you more sensitive to other people," he says.

At Christmas, Eric enjoys being at home with his family and the good spirits the holiday brings. Not to mention the cookies. According to Eric, Mrs. Scott is an expert cookie baker. "My favorite is something Mom calls Spicy Gumdrop Hermits," he says. "She makes them every Christmas."

JIM-BOB
"Ever eat a Candy Cane Sundae?"

As one of the youngest members of the cast, 15-year-old David S. Harper seems almost unaware of his actor status.

Ask him about Christmas, and David will tell you it's great because "there's no school and you have more time to come up with all kinds of gooey ice-cream concoctions." One of his specialties is to crush peppermint candy canes on top of vanilla ice-cream, topped with chocolate sauce, whipped cream and cherries!

ELIZABETH
"I help my mother give 'finger-food' parties."

Since both her parents work, Kami Cotler's family makes every effort to relax and see friends at Christmas. Mrs. Cotler likes to serve "finger-food" buffet parties and Kami enjoys helping. One of Kami's holiday specialties is to fill pitted dates with peanut butter and roll them in sugar. "If you roll some in colored sugar and some in white sugar, you can design them in a box and give them as a present," Kami explains.

Be sure to watch "The Homecoming"—a Christmas story—a special episode of "The Waltons" on Friday, December 24, at 9:00 PM (EST) on CBS.

’Tis the Season for a delicious Holiday Buffet.

HOW MUCH DO YOU KNOW ABOUT CHRISTMAS?

Why do we use holly? What is "hackin"? What favorite Christmas character is a "squeezing old sinner"?

By Bill Colson

Q. Where did the tradition of trimming the Christmas tree begin?

A. Trimming a tree with ornaments dates as far back as ancient Rome, but Christmas-tree decorations, as such, probably originated in Germany in the 16th century, where trees were adorned with gilded nuts, apples, sugar figures, dolls and shepherds.

Q. How did the custom of sending cards at Christmas originate?

A. It most likely began in England in the early 19th century among the upper classes. Then, when reforms in the British postal system permitted cards to be sent at a uniform penny rate, the custom quickly spread.

Q. Why is St. Francis of Assisi important to Christmas?

A. He began the transformation of the carol from a solemn hymn to a festive song celebrating Christ's birth and is thought to have created the crèche.

Q. According to tradition, what is the proper way to kiss under the mistletoe?

A. Each person kissed is supposed to remove a berry. After the last berry has been picked, the kissing should end.

Q. The carol, "Joy to the World," is based on two famous sources. What are they?

A. The text of the carol is a paraphrase of Psalm 98, and the music is taken from various sections of Handel's The Messiah.

Q. What is the symbolic significance of holly?

A. The red berries symbolize Christ's blood; the sharp thorns His painful crown.

Q. What major American novel of the 1950's is also the title of a famous Christmas song?

A. Go Tell It on the Mountain, by James Baldwin.

Q. Who levied a fine for "observing any such day as Christmas"?

A. The Puritans of the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

Q. What is "hackin"?

A. Until the 18th century, plum pudding was known as "hackin" because its ingredients were hacked (chopped) before being mixed into the dessert.

Q. Match writer or composer with work

a) Tchaikovsky
b) Charles Dickens
c) Clement C. Moore
d) O. Henry
e) Dylan Thomas
f) Martin Luther
g) George Handel
h) J. S. Bach

1) 'Twas the Night Before Christmas
2) The Messiah
3) A Child's Christmas in Wales
4) Nutcracker Suite

CHRISTMAS QUIZ

Continued

Q. Which is the only Gospel to mention the Wise Men?

A. Matthew. Not mentioned, however, is how many Wise Men there were. The number is usually set at three because of the three gifts they brought to the Christ child (gold, frankincense and myrrh), but in some paintings and historical writings their number ranges from two to twelve.

Q. What Christmas plant was named after a United States ambassador?

A. The poinsettia was named after Dr. Joel Poinsett (1851), who served as U.S. Ambassador to Mexico. A native plant of Central America, it was brought by Dr. Poinsett to South Carolina, where it flourished.

Q. What Christian churches do not celebrate Christmas on December 25?

A. Many Eastern Orthodox churches throughout Russia and Eastern Europe follow the Julian rather than the Gregorian calendar and thus are thirteen days behind our dates. They celebrate Christmas on January 6.

Q. What do the following historical events have in common?
a) In 496 Clovis I, pagan king of the Franks, was baptized—an event which was the first real step toward the formation of the French nation.
b) In 800 Charlemagne was crowned Emperor of the West.
c) In 1066 William the Conqueror ascended England's throne.
d) In 1099 Christians celebrated the victory of the first Holy Crusade.

A. Each occurred on Christmas Day.

Q. According to the Bible, what animals were present at Jesus' birth?

A. The Bible mentions no animals at the birth, but later writers often added everything from donkeys to lambs—and even camels.

Q. Why is Thomas Nast, the famous 19th-century political cartoonist, important to Christmas?

A. His sketch for Harper's Weekly in the 1860's (see illustration page 11) was largely responsible for transforming the Christmastime gift giver from St. Nicholas, a slim austere patriarch in bishop's robes, to Santa Claus, the portly, figure in a red outfit.

Q. Who were Melchior, Balthasar and Caspar?

A. The three Wise Men were given these names around 900.

Q. How did Joseph and Mary know to take the infant Jesus to Egypt?

A. According to Matthew 2:13, an angel appeared to Joseph in a dream and said, "Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt . . . for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him."

Q. Name the author of the following passage, the work in which it appears and the person being described in it.
"Oh! But he was a tight-fisted hand at the grindstone . . . a squeezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous, old sinner! Hard and sharp as flint, from which no steel had ever struck out generous fire; secret, and self-contained, and solitary as an oyster. . . . He iced his coffee in the dog-days; and didn't thaw it one degree at Christmas.

A. Charles Dickens; A Christmas Carol; Scrooge.

Proof of temporary relief from minor arthritic pain

PHILADELPHIA—Tests at a Philadelphia nursing home have shown that Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub brings hours of temporary relief to minor arthritic pain, and can help improve mobility. The tests were conducted at The Presbyterian Home for Widows and Single Women, with an instrument designed to measure grip strength. Each woman first tested her grip; then applied Mentholatum Deep Heating Rub. Its greaseless, stainless formula warms deep, eases stiffness, soothes pain. Hours later when tested again, the grip strength of most of those tested had significantly improved. Use as directed.

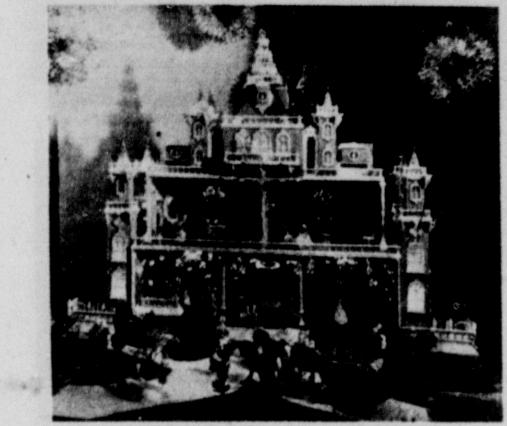
WHAT IN THE WORLD!



A Child's Castle at $10,000

THE MOST EXPENSIVE CHRISTMAS PRESENTS IN THE WORLD

Pretend you're a millionaire and can buy anything you want from stores around the country. What would you get? Well, for the kids, why not a $10,000 Dream Castle just waiting to be picked up. It's handmade in Bavaria and the only one of its kind in the U.S.A. In front of the entrance is a lawn setting with a horse-drawn carriage waiting at its edge. Inside, there's a fully lighted hall of mirrors in which miniature dancing figures in 17th-century costumes cavort to the strains of "A Little Night Music."

If fun for the whole family is more what you had in mind, how about really surprising them on Christmas day with Your Own Amusement Park at just $2,000,000 an acre? You provide the land, and the fantasy spot is yours. Price tag includes a former Disney designer, parking, electricity and water. For those more interested in heritage than in high living, you now have the perfect gift—an autographed letter from President Thomas Jefferson to Col. John Taylor, dated March 14, 1821. A steal for only $8,500. It's said that one needs even heat distribution to make a good omelet. So be the hit of your neighborhood with this stocking present—solid-gold omelet pan for $30,000. We only hope it lives up to its promise to create the ultimate omelet each and every time. It features a rosewood handle and a French oak box. Also includes four pounds of white truffles, four dozen double-yoked eggs and a documented essay on the omelet pan.

"Around the World in 80 Days" your secret fantasy? Do it after New Year's with a balloon trip to wherever your heart desires. May we suggest some sensational soaring above the Grand Canyon for $6,000? Includes an FAA licensed balloon pilot, limousine to the balloon and champagne.

You will, of course, want to move now that you're so rich. How about a revolving, round house? It's a steal at $835,000. The entire house can rotate to change the view at will or to follow —or elude—the sun. If you want to check the realtor, take a look at the houses of some of his ex-clients such as Bing Crosby, Bette Davis, various Rockefellers, Jackie Gleason, Guy Lombardo, Dean Martin, Jimmy Stewart, the late Billy Rose, Edmund de Rothschild, the late Duke of Windsor, Mary Martin, Charles Schultz and—last but not least—the Bank of New York.

For where to buy these Christmas "dream gifts," write Family Weekly.

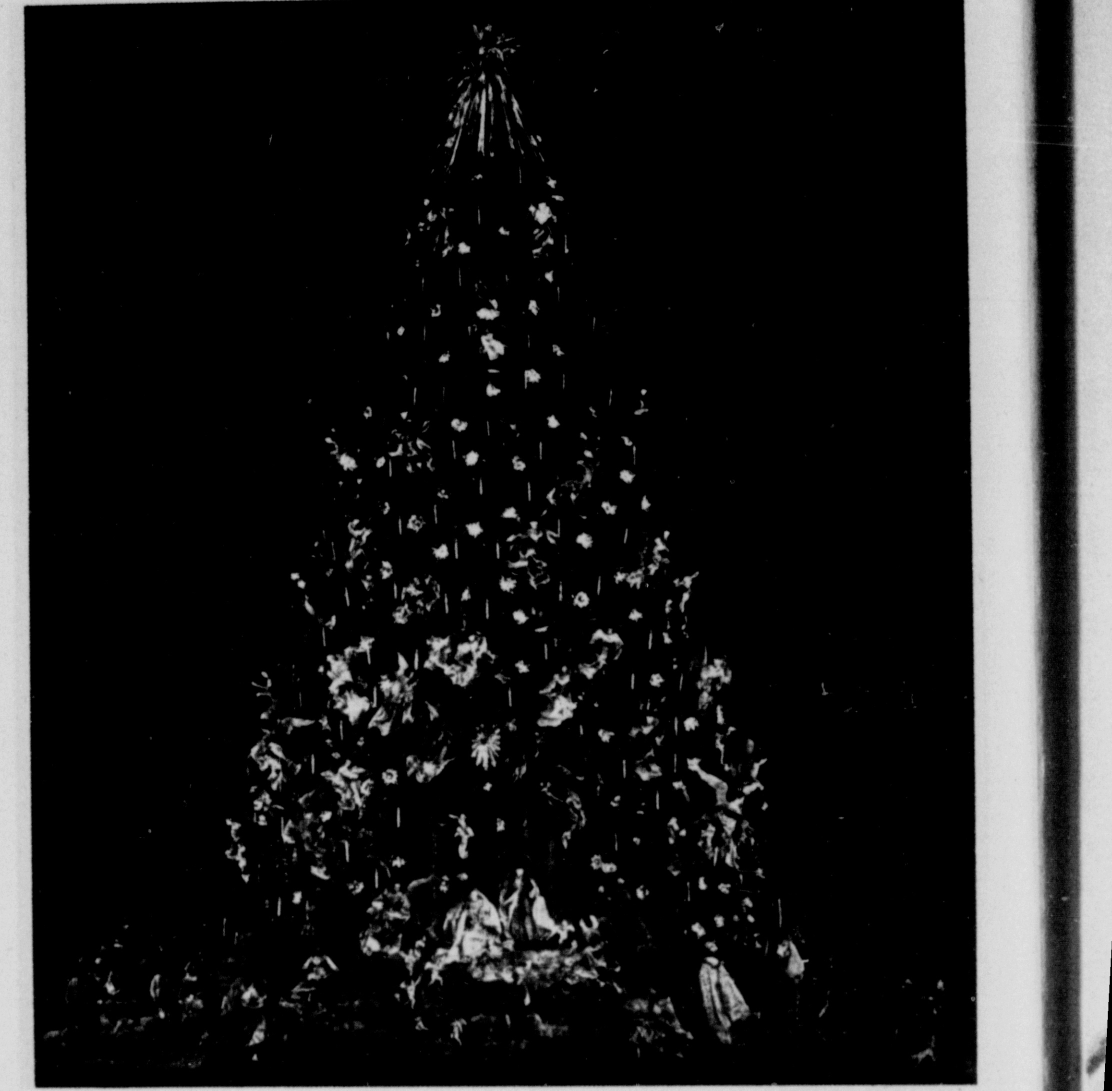
A Castle for Grownups at $835,000



ON THIS WEEK'S COVER, A SPECTACULAR CHRISTMAS TREE

When Loretta Hines Howard presented her precious collection of Neapolitan Christmas crèche figures to New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art, little did she realize that its yearly installation at the foot of the Museum's giant tree would become a cherished event for people around the world. That angel on our cover is only one of 50 equally elegant and heavenly creatures—clad in swirling pastel draperies, their hair knotted by a mystical wind—who, seemingly by magic. hover suspended in adoration over the birth of the Christ child.

There are also shepherds carved to look like the real peasants they were modeled on, dozens of dimpled cherubs, hosts of country people, horses, sheep, oxen, goats—even an elephant. The three Magi are there—splendidly attired in long cloaks of silk embroidered with silver, gold and sequins. The figures are made of terra cotta and wood and are 12 to 15 inches high.

Because in the 18th century the queen of Naples and her ladies were often given the task of clothing the human figures, each is outfitted in exquisite detail. Even the buttons on cloaks and boots are tiny semi-precious stones. The Howard crèche combines two European traditions: the Northern European practice of decorating the Christmas tree, and the custom of Southern Europe, which calls for a reenactment of the Nativity scene.

Christmas crib building first made its appearance in Italy sometime around 1670. It was the favorite pastime of the leading families of the aristocracy. The beautiful creatures of the Howard crèche may once have belonged to a crib set up by a famous Neapolitan family. But this year, they are in the Sculpture Garden of the Metropolitan. Museum spokeswoman Maggie Burton says, "It's very beautiful, but it's more than that; it's an ideal stage setting for the most powerful drama ever—and in a perfect kind of theater."
